PRICES UP IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose sharply in the United States last month following September's slow-down, owing partly to the energy crisis and higher prices for fuel oil and gasoline, the government said today.

The labor department reported the cost of living climbed eight-tenths of one per cent in October and pushed consumer prices up 7.9 per cent above a year ago.

It marked the largest jump in any 12-month period since the 8.7-per-cent inflationary rate recorded in the June 1950-51 period at the start of the Korean War.

In addition to sharply higher prices for gasoline and fuel oil, rising costs for clothing, mortgage interest rates and health insurance contributed significantly to the October rise in prices, the government said.

A decline in meat and poultry prices was more than offset in the statistics by large increases in prices of restaurant meals and some food and some grocery store prices.

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Beryl Plumptre of the food prices review board says a survey of the country's food stores confirms suspicions they are neither sufficiently competitive nor concerned about consumers.

Commenting today on a board report recommending a series of consumer-protection measures, Mrs. Plumptre said most devious food-selling practices have been known for years.

"But the report makes very clear just how widespread they are."

It attacks retailers for attempting to trick customers with a variety of "deceiving and confusing" selling methods, including double-ticketing, exaggerated low-price claims and a lack of advertised specials.

Mrs. Plumptre said retailers will be invited to a public meeting here Dec. 10 to comment on the report and explain malpractices uncovered by the investigators.

She added that the report points up an urgent need to provide consumers with better information about buying food; an educational process that should begin in schools.

The government was moving in the direction of tougher consumer protection laws, but a number of areas needed more attention, particularly the relationship among big elements in the food industry.

As it was, the industry was "not sufficiently competitive."

A total of 159 instances indicating possible retail law-breaking were uncovered during the survey and referred to the consumer affairs department for further action.

Two Montreal food stores have subsequently been charged with misleading advertising: Salaison Joanisse with "illegally advertising foods in such a manner as to create a false impression relative to the quantity and value of the said foods and Royal Butchers with a similar charge.

In the report, the board urges the government to strengthen inspection forces at retail levels, to enforce more strictly and extend misleading advertising legislation, to introduce legislation on deceptive retailing practices, and to "explore" legislation to improve competition among retailers.

It also wants to extend packaging requirements to cut down the number of different size containers, to clarify and more strictly enforce product standards and grading regulations and to work with industry to provide more information food buying.

"For a number of years, consumers have been objecting, individually and through their organizations, to a number of merchandising practices in many food stores which make it difficult for them to be certain they are securing the best value for their food dollar," the report says.

"But authorities have paid little attention to these complaints.

FIRST TANKER ON THURSDAY

The first in a series of oil tankers carrying crude oil from Vancouver to the east coast will pass Victoria Thursday evening.

It is the beginning of a massive export of crude oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca — as large as the inbound movement of crude oil to Cherry Point.

Kenneth Hall, vice-president of Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co., said today eight tankers will carry 1.5 million barrels of oil through the strait in December.

In the same month, three larger tankers will bring an identical 1.5 million barrels of oil past Victoria on the way to the Atlantic Richfield refinery at Cherry Point, near Bellingham.

The difference is the Vancouver exports will come closer to Victoria, moving in Canadian waters.

The first tanker, being loaded at Trans Mountain's Burnaby dock today, is the 30,000-ton Greek tanker, Kimon, which will carry 180,000 barrels.

It is scheduled to leave Vancouver about noon Thursday, passing Victoria about supper time. It will go through the Panama Canal and unload at Portland, Maine, where a pipeline will carry the oil to Montreal.

Hall said eight tankers have already been lined up for the December shipments. The vessels are of Greek, Danish and British registry. The company is seeking additional vessels for January, February and March.

Kissinger Warns Of U.S. Retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger said today the United States will not shift its Middle East policy because of the Arab oil embargo, and warned that U.S. counter measures may be necessary.

He told a news conference that "It is clear" if the Arab shutdown of oil to the U.S. continues unreasonably and indefinitely, "the United States will have to decide what counter measures are necessary."

However, he said, "we hope it won't come to this." The Nixon administration's hope is that the Arabs will decide that the U.S. is "acting in an even-handed effort to find a just and honorable peace in the Middle East," Kissinger said.

Kissinger said American policy was outlined to the Arab foreign ministers at the United Nations in September and remains constant to this date.

That policy is to "move forward" to the beginning of negotiations that will bring "a just and lasting peace."

Kissinger's announcement came as most eminent economists called on their country Tuesday to resist Arab oil blackmail and consider counter-measures against countries "committing hostile acts of embargo."

The statement issued in Cambridge, Mass., was the most forceful declaration to date about the worsening oil situation from a group outside government and business circles.

"If united, the (consuming nations) can refuse to supply food and manufactured goods to the nations committing the hostile acts of embargo," the economists stated.

"The Soviet Union might find it difficult to make up the deficit and the Arabs might well be unwilling to accept the resulting dependence."

The reference to a counter-boycott had the effect of a nudge to the Nixon administration, which has indicated extreme reluctance to consider such steps.

However Tuesday night a top state department official said economic blackmail would work both ways.

The official, State Undersecretary William Porter, did not specifically threaten retaliation but noted that the U.S. produces much of the world's food and industrial goods.

Porter, in a speech in Bowling Green, Ky., said:

"In a world which may well see growing shortages of a variety of commodities, economic blackmail in any form

LEWIS WILLING TO FORCE VOTE

Times News Services

The New Democratic Party could fight a winter election on the energy issue and score points with the voters, federal leader David Lewis claimed Tuesday.

"We'd do well . . . It's an issue which is ours," he told reporters in Ottawa after dropping a veiled threat to dump the minority Liberal government if it lets the voluntary national price freeze on petroleum products end Jan. 30 as scheduled.

He said more voters than ever before are accepting the general NDP view that energy resources must be "treated like a public utility" and removed from the control of large multi-national corporations.

There is "much to distinguish" NDP energy policies from those of the Liberal and Conservative parties — including divergent views on tax laws affecting resource industries, he said.

In particular, he said, a federally-operated national petroleum corporation should be established to take charge of all oil buying — of both domestic and foreign crude.

The corporation also should become involved in every segment of the petroleum industry from production to distribution, giving the public an effective voice in the industry.

Only if major policy shifts are made will the public have the protection it should in a time of ever-rising energy costs and uncertain supplies, he said.

He made his comments after being told in the Commons by Prime Minister Trudeau that the government has no plans to let the price freeze run longer than the five-month period set when it began Sept. 4.

The NDP leader said he will take the toughest possible stand on this question, possibly voting against the government.

"It could include that. I don't say it will include it, but it could."

He called energy a critical issue and said it is "certainly one on which the government might fall." But he refused to be pinned down, saying it would be "a stupid decision" to make at this stage.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. of Toronto, meanwhile, is seeking a price increase for petroleum products east of the Ottawa Valley.

The company has asked the federal government for permission for a price increase of 4.5 cents a gallon on all products from its Montreal refinery, with an increase of 3.9 cents a gallon on gasoline and fuel oils produced in the Atlantic provinces.

The increases are sought to offset higher costs of imported crude from Iran, Venezuela and West Africa that became effective Oct. 15 and Nov. 1, the company said.

Shell Canada Ltd. of Toronto applied earlier this month for approval to raise its gasoline prices by 5.1 cents a gallon east of the Ottawa Valley and to raise fuel prices by 4.5 cents a gallon.

Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto is seeking an increase of 4.8 cents a gallon for gasoline in the same areas and 4.3 cents a gallon for home heating oil.

And in Toronto, provincial Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said Tuesday that Ontario would ration gasoline before banning Sunday driving.

McKeough, however, emphasized that energy supplies are not yet low enough to warrant rationing.

He said it would be extremely difficult to "legitimize" who could drive on Sunday and who couldn't.

Soviet A-Arms Said In Egypt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union probably shipped nuclear weapons into Egypt during the October war, U.S. officials now believe.

These weapons are still believed to be in Egypt, though undoubedly under strict Russian control.

They are thought to be atomic warheads for mobile Soviet-built "Scud" missiles, also shipped to Egypt at some point either before or during the fighting.

The missiles have a range estimated at between 160 to 180 miles, far enough to bring Israeli cities within their reacr if launched from northeastern sectors of Egypt.,

The officials say the U.S. detected nuclear material being carried aboard Soviet military supply ships moving from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean.

By itself, this type of information is inconclusive, because the Soviet Navy, like the U.S. Navy, carries nuclear weapons.

But at least one of these vessels reportedly did enter an Egyptian port.

Intelligence sources say, however, that this vessel and possibly some others also showed signs of still having some nuclear material aboard when they left port.

Officials decline to discuss the details of whether measuring devices can detect whether some material was unloaded from the ships, or whether there is other evidence to support the view that

More Tape Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House disclosed in court today that an 18-minute segment is missing from another of the Watergate tapes subpoenaed by the special prosecutor's office.

Attorney J. Fred Buzhardt told the court the tape of June 20, 1972, contains 18 minutes of an audible tone but no voice recordings.

"The phenomenon occurred in the course of a conversation," he said, adding that the White House has checked other tapes subpoenaed and found them all in good condition.

Buzhardt told U.S. District Judge John Sirica that technical tests had been made to find the cause of the interruption without success.

Also Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski says the White House warned him that part of his investigation is treading on national security secrets, but he is pursuing the case anyway.

I Was Deceived: Lawson

LAWSON
. . . taking sides

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamsters union leader Ed Lawson said Tuesday British Columbia Health Minister Dennis Cocke "knowingly deceived me" on the Minister's stand in the California grape dispute.

Lawson, international vice-president of the Teamsters, said the provincial government was "clearly taking sides" in what was essentially a dispute between two rival unions and said the issue may cause his union to reassess its position of support for the NDP government.

Lawson made the charges at a press conference, at which he said Cocke "was not telling the truth."

The charges arose from telephone calls between the minister and the Teamsters leader and an interview of Cocke on the CBC.

The dispute over the California grapes is between the Teamsters and Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, with the B.C. Federation of Labor backing the farm workers and ordering a boycott of California grapes.

Last week, Cocke said institutions under his control, such as hospitals, wouldn't be buying California grapes.

Lawson said he phoned Cocke and was assured the boycott applied only to non-union grapes.

Cocke, according to Lawson, said during the CBC interview, the boycott applied to all California grapes.

JUST HOW WELL DID AGENCIES PERFORM?

In the early-morning hours of Oct. 25, teletypes in newspapers, radio and TV stations began chattering out the news that the United States had ordered its armed forces on a world-wide alert as a result of developments in the Middle East war.

Readers and listeners, anxious to know how serious the situation was, were dependent primarily on the three major news-gathering services — Associated Press, Reuters and United Press International. For an analysis of how well the three performed see Page 6 in today's Times.

Greek Roundup Continues

Times News Services

ATHENS — Greek military authorities cracked down today on opposition politicians, students, Communists and other suspected participants in the three-day anti-government rebellion that returned martial law to Greece.

Troops backed by tanks and armored personnel carriers continued to guard the parliament building and Athens university. The army still occupied the Zappeion national garden.

The city was quiet for the third consecutive day since the uprising that left 12 persons dead and about 150 injured and police continued rounding up suspects.

The Greek government also today dissolved 29 student associations and confiscated their property.

All universities in Greece already had been ordered closed until Dec. 16 in a move to weaken student power, and three politicians, foes of the regime, were placed under house arrest Tuesday night.

Martial law provisions suspend several articles of the constitution dealing with civil liberties and human rights and this has been coupled with press censorship.

Argentine President Juan Peron suffered a mild heart attack early today, informed sources said.

A government communique said only that Peron, 78, was recovering from a relapse of a bronchial ailment he suffered last week.

But other sources said the communique was issued to avoid spreading alarm about the health of Peron, who returned to power in Argentina earlier this year.

prices the significance of these practices has become much greater."

The report says the survey found that average prices were higher as distance increased from central distribution centres; coastal province prices were higher than in central provinces, costs in Northern regions were higher than those in more populated areas and big city prices generally were lower than those in small communities and rural areas.

While transportation was given as the main cause of the price difference, the "survey found indications of other factors tending to reduce competition."

The board says such things as concentration of ownership in some regions and "zone pricing systems" related to the degree of competition in others would be further examined.

IGNORE POLICY

The report criticizes a number of food firms which agreed last August to let consumers pay the lowest price when two or more prices were marked on an item.

"In many cases, this agreement is not being implemented by store managers," the report says.

Test purchases made by the investigators usually proved to cost the higher price in cases where products carried more than one label.

The report said five retailers—Dominion Stores, Food City, IGA, Canada Safeway and Woodwards—agreed in August not to raise the price of any food item on the shelf on which the price already was marked.

"The survey found that in no organization was this agreement being fully implemented."

Of 1,666 stores checked for double-ticketing, 850, or 51 per cent followed the practice.

DISPLAYS DECEPTIVE

The report also attacks grocery stores for using end-aisle displays to "confuse and deceive" consumers.

Prices of displayed items often were the same as those on the shelf or actually higher and in some cases cashiers charged the higher price if a customer picked the item off the shelf rather than from the display.

The report also criticizes the use of red lights over meat counters to make meat look more appealing and of using signs that say "special" for items at regular prices.

"The difference in regular price levels between competing chains and competing stores are not sufficient to justify the generally advertised claims."

The board said it would be prepared to hold public hearings to give food retailers a chance to reply to the various criticisms.

Youths Charged In Theft

Two youths were remanded in custody after appearing in Victoria provincial court today charged with breaking, entering and theft of tools from a construction shed in Colwood early this morning.

Judge William Ostler remanded Steven Knight, 17, and Roger Gerald Lessard, 18, both of no fixed address, to Friday at the request of Prosecutor Peter Birkett.

Two youths were arrested shortly after as they sat in a car near the scene.

with any commodity will be a two-edged sword — hurting those who wield it as well as intended victims."

The economists who supported consideration of countermeasures included four Nobel Prize winners: Kenneth J. Arrow, Simon Kuznets and Wassily Leontief, all of Harvard, and Paul Samuelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the other three were Kenneth Galbraith, of Harvard, now president of the American economic Association, and Yale's Merton Peck and MIT's Franklin Fisher.

Another economist, Robert Solow, of MIT, signed the statement but dissented on the counter-boycott.

The economists agreed that the reduction in total Arab oil production, which they estimated at 25 per cent, is "genuinely damaging" to the consuming nations, though the United States is harmed least of all.

They said that because of the shortage of domestic refining capacity, fuel oil would be scarce even if plenty of crude oil was available.

The main impact domestically, they said, will be in east coast industry which is about 85 per cent dependent on imported supplies.

Concerning the Arab embargo, the economists stated:

"We warn that letting our policies be determined or even influenced by the threat of injury is as futile as it is ignoble. Oil is a non-durable good. If to maintain this flow we acceded to a course of action we do not otherwise desire, then it will follow as the night the day that we will be blackmailed again and again."

They indicated that an uncompromising U.S. stand would help U.S. allies, for the Arabs would realize then that they are "tormenting Europe and Asia to no purpose."

They added that the consuming nations are "not without weapons of their own."

"It would be more productive for (them) to confer on such counter-measures than to outdo each other in subservience which profits them nothing," they wrote.

The economists' statement was at sharp odds with the privately expressed views of top U.S. oil company executives.

Some of them told President Nixon as early as 1969 that America's policy toward Israel conflicted with the country's energy needs.

The executives favor a more conciliatory policy toward the Arab nations.

They fear retaliation by the United States might be met with nationalization of their assets in the Middle East.

Representatives of the 12 largest U.S. oil companies met Tuesday with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

One of the Harvard economists who signed the statement issued in Cambridge, Wassily Leontief, charged at a news conference that the oil companies "miscalculated willingly or unwillingly the growth of demand.

"The oil shortage is not simply the result of the Arab oil embargo, but also of gross mismanagement on the part of our private oil industry abetted by our national government," he said.

Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, meanwhile, said the eastern part of the United States may be heading for electrical power brownouts by December or January because of the fuel crisis.

A deputy assistant secretary of interior, Eric Zausner, said an onrushing shortage of residual oil will leave many power plants so short of fuel, especially on the east coast, that consumption of electrical power must be reduced 10 to 20 per cent.

Morton also told a news conference that shortages of residual oil will begin hurting, particularly in power plants, by early December.

Shortage of disillate oils — primarily home heating oil and diesel and jet fuel — will hit late in January and gasoline shortages may begin showing up in early or mid-February, Morton said.

One of Nixon's top aides said the president is giving no thought to banning automobile driving on Sunday.

Roy Ash, director of the office of management and budget ruled out consideration of any Sunday ban on driving, but said Nixon is considering proposals to prohibit the sale of gasoline on Sunday.

In Bismarck, N.D. Gov. Arthur Link today proclaimed North Dakota a disaster emergency area and issued executive orders aimed at implementing energy conservation programs in the state.

Christmas Trees Boosted in Price

Christmas trees have gone the way of most other commodities and will be more expensive this year.

Wholesalers estimated today that trees will cost between 5 and 10 per cent more this year.

J. G. McCully, a Vancouver wholesaler, said the higher cost of labor was the major reason for the increase.

the warheads are in fact in Egypt.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today there is no doubt the United States will pressure Israel to make concessions to Egypt over the withdrawal of forces on the Suez front.

The question is expected to reach a showdown Thursday when Israeli and Egyptian senior officers hold their sixth meeting on the Cairo-Suez road.

Egypt said today Israel's refusal to withdraw to the Oct. 22 ceasefire line jeopardized the chances of peace.

Even as the government mapped out its strategy for the withdrawal negotiations, the army radio reported Syrian artillery fire in the Mizrat Beit Jihan area on the Syrian front.

Israeli units returned fire, but no casualities were reported, the broadcast said.

At the United Nations, a Soviet spokesman Tuesday accused China of warmongering in the Middle East and at the same time appealed to Peking to help pay for the peacekeeping force.

China and its European ally, Albania, have called the force illegal and reiterated Tuesday night they will not participate in its financing.

Soviet envoy Vasily Sarfronchuk accused China of "doing everything to impede the ceasefire and create conditions that would deepen and ignite an even broader war in the Middle East. . . ."

In reply, Chinese delegate Wang Wei-tsai said: "The Arab and Palestine people have launched a just war against Israeli aggression and you're doing your best to stamp it out whiles. . . trying to curry favor with the monopoly capitalists. . . ."

Sharp Waited

Canadian officials were pleased when Sharp was invited to the Kosygin meeting after he arrived in Moscow Sunday night, welcoming it as a sign of good relations with the Soviet government.

But Sharp was kept waiting more than two hours today before Kosygin was ready to see him.

Sharp said trade would likely be the major topic in the meeting.

Artists at Work Draw 8,000

Eight thousand people, including hundreds of children, attended the recent three-and-a-half day Artists at Work demonstration at Victoria Art Gallery.

Queues stretched out into the street and the Women's Committee which organized the event were under pressure in coping with the unexpected influx.

Attendance for this third annual show was double last year.

More artists and craftsmen participated and covered a greater range of skills.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has cancelled the six-week-old military alert for the 60 ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea, the Pentagon said Monday.

OTTAWA (CP) — The communications breakdown between Ottawa and Alberta over energy issues has been resolved, a spokesman for Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said today.

"It was a very good meeting; relations have picked up and the minister was very pleased with the outcome."

The spokesman said Macdonald also will meet Alberta officials Friday in Toronto during a federal-provincial meeting of energy ministers.

Truck Loads Eyed For Saanich Curb

Load restrictions may be enforced on commercial vehicles using certain roads in Saanich.

One of the first affected would be the much-travelled McKenzie.

A public works committee meeting Tuesday recommended that police and the engineering department combine forces for a study that could lead to the restrictions.

Property owners in the 600-block McKenzie attended Tuesday's meeting to voice complaints. A petition signed by 12 residents, asked that a temporary traffic ban be imposed on tandem and trailer trucks travelling between Glanford and Douglas on McKenzie.

The petitioners said that vibrations caused by loaded vehicles shifting gears to make it up the hill had caused "severe cracking of plaster, concrete and window damage to the houses located in this area."

They were told a temporary ban on commercial vehicles was impossible at this time.

"We don't get police protection," one man complained, "Some drivers are burning the rubber at 90 miles an hour going down the hill."

Another man said the pictures shook on the walls of his home every time a heavy vehicle passed.

In other business the committee recommended:

—A crosswalk be installed on Cedar Hill at North Dairy and Doncaster and a footpath made to the Cedar Hill community centre so that children can cross the road in safety.

—School District 61 be contacted and asked to provide fencing for two properties on Hartwood, adjoining Gordon Head Junior Secondary School, in line with the district's policy of providing fencing for all areas surrounding schools.

BEAU GETS BUNGED

WARSAW (UPI) — Construction workers in Szczecin tore out part of an apartment house wall to free a man trapped in the building's garbage chute, the newspaper Expres Wieczorny said Tuesday.

The man had been with another man's wife when her husband and several friends arrived home unexpectedly, the newspaper said. The group escorted the unfortunate lover to the building's top floor, where they stuffed him head first into the narrow chute.

"He became stuck between the eighth and ninth floors and could be extricated only by knocking down part of the wall," the newspaper said.

2 Women Go Overboard

One woman was rescued and another is missing and presumed drowned after both went overboard fro different British Columbia ferries crossing from Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay late Tuesday afternoon.

RCMP are withholding the names.

Police said a 47-year-old Vancouver woman disappeared from the Queen of Saanich. She was last seen on the ferry as it passed Portlock Point on Prevost Island about an hour out of Tsawwassen.

A suicide note was found together with the woman's coat and handbag shortly after the vessel docked at Swartz Bay at 7 p.m.

Ganges RCMP said one boat searched the area Tuesday night and two are searching the area today.

In the other incident two hours earlier, a 26-year-old Vancouver woman went overboard from the Queen of Victoria about five miles from Swartz Bay.

She was seen by a passenger in the water and was picked up 22 minutes later.

RCMP in Sidney said she was treated by a doctor aboard the ferry, then transferred to Resthaven Hospital where she was admitted suffering from exposure.

A police spokesan said she is expected to be discharged today.

ICBC Boobed: Barrett

Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday the government-owned Insurance Corporation of B.C. made a "human error" when it bought land in Richmond designated as farmland.

"It's human to err, divine to forgive," Barrett said when asked by reporters about the bungle which has come under heavy fire from Liberal leader David Anderson.

Anderson claimed the government must be planning to get into the farming business.

The parcel of land in Richmond, bought by the ICBC to set up a claims centre, has been frozen by the government's own land commission from any subdivision or building.

ICBC has appealed to both the land commission and Richmond council to have the freeze lifted but have failed in both attempts.

The premier would not disclose what the government plans to do with the land now but he was quick to say the ICBC did make an error and was likely to make more errors in the future.

The ICBC, meanwhile, is still looking for a site for the claims centre in that area and Monday night ran into more trouble as Surrey council unanimously rejected a proposal to build it in that municipality.

Surrey planning department said the proposed site is residentially zoned and the claims centre would ruin a municipal development scheme.

CLAIMS CENTRE LAGS

The Victoria claims centre of the government-owned Insurance Corporation of B.C. will not be ready when the scheme goes into effect March 1, a spokesman for the corporation said today.

Information officer Bob Porter said plans for the centre are only at the architect's drawing stage and tenders will not be called for several weeks. The corporation estimates the construction period will be four months.

The centre will be built at the site of the Johnston Terminals operations, 3300 Douglas St., which has already been acquired by ICBC.

A temporary claims centre will be in operation at that location while construction of the new building is completed, Porter said.

There will be two other centres on Vancouver Island where damaged vehicles, under the government auto insurance scheme, will be taken for adjusters' appraisal. Tenders closed Tuesday for the centre to be built at Nanaimo. The Campbell River centre will be a branch operation with rented facilities.

Porter confirmed there will be a large number of claims centres not completed before the March 1 start of the scheme. Most of these will be in the Lower Mainland where 12 claims centres will be located.

Afloat on Heavy Water

The federal government's decision to go ahead with a heavy water plant at Gentilly, Quebec — it will be Canada's fourth — comes none too soon. Heavy water, a rare molecular form obtained from ordinary water, may be derived from either fresh or salt sources. It is an essential element in the type of nuclear power plant that Canada has chosen to manufacture, acting as a controlling agent of the nuclear reaction and a means of transferring heat for the production of power.

The country's continually short supply of heavy water has been a serious handicap in the development of Canadian reactors. The latest plant to be opened, at Bruce, Ontario, had to borrow heavy water from existing reactors. Canada has had to import heavy water — some from Russia — in order to carry on its nuclear power industry.

Most of the shortage results from the fiasco of the Glace Bay heavy water plant, which was designed to gather the rare commodity from sea water but apparently surprised everyone when its metal piping was corroded by hot brine. It seems incredible that this inevitability was not guarded against in planning a plant costing many millions of dollars. It will cost at least another $100 millions to put the monster into production.

The program to build more heavy water plants is a crucial one for Canada, if domestic nuclear energy production and sales of reactors abroad are to go forward. The Canadian reactor differs from other types in that it does not require refined uranium, and does not produce the amounts of radioactive waste that other systems do. But it has been a long struggle to establish the industry and prove the worth of the Canadian process.

The plant at Gentilly will therefore come at a critical time and it is hard to believe that the decision to build was delayed by parochial considerations of whether it should be in the East or the West. Additional heavy water plants will be required as the nuclear age progresses; there should be no further risks of costly delay in obtaining nuclear power merely through lack of ability to ensure a supply of the key ingredient.

The whole situation takes on added importance now that the world is in the throes of an oil shortage which may be relieved temporarily but which will become unavoidably more severe as time goes on. Canada, fortunate in its natural energy resources, should nevertheless press forward with its preparations for the new age.

It's Not Much of a Hardship

The washroom doors are labelled in three languages and airplanes arrive regularly from a foreign country but the Victoria International Airport is an inadequate structure to bear such a pretentious name. Constructed in 1963, the number of arriving and departing passengers has jumped from 180,000 to 400,000 in a few years. Even the ministry of transport acknowledges the cramped conditions when it says that Victoria's airport with 24,000 square feet of floor space is the most overcrowded of seven major Canadian airports.

Nearly $1 million is scheduled to be spent on the airport by the federal government in the next five years, including $500,000 on the expansion of the passenger terminal building between 1976 and 1978. Meanwhile, an Air Canada official says the airport is "choking to death" in the summer months because of increased charter flights, and he recommends an emergency plan to cope with burgeoning air travellers. Anyone who has milled around the cramped space or lined up for customs inspection when regular flights coincide with charter flights would agree.

But before the government is alarmed into interim measures of tacking on a wing here, a wing there, a total plan should be worked out incorporating growth factors, customs clearance and new baggage procedures, to name a few items. At present, for example, arriving passengers must leave the terminal to collect their baggage.

If it can be shown that some interim measures are necessary they should be implemented. But the gradual five-year improvement program proposed by the government allows breathing space to consider new factors such as lack of jet fuel which may result in fewer flights. And if we have to rub shoulders at close quarters for the next few years of flying, it's not much of a hardship. Try to think of it this way: many Canadians can't even afford to fly.

JAMES RESTON

The Vital Campaign Trail

WASHINGTON — President Nixon took a chance when he invited the Senators and Representatives to the White House to question him about Watergate, but he has made some progress in these strange and unprecedented efforts to restore confidence in his battered Administration.

The chance he took was fairly obvious. The Congress was beginning the long and delicate procedure of impeachment. In this process, members of the House of Representatives would be, in effect, a grand jury, deciding whether to indict him for high crimes and misdemeanors, and members of the Senate were potential judges. Therefore, inviting them to the White House to talk things over was a little dicey, for in a way he risked the charge that he was not only refusing to meet in private with the Senate Watergate committee members who had studied the evidence, but that he was actually lobbying the jurors from the House and the judges from the Senate.

More Confident

So far the evidence is that he has dealt with this problem very well. He started poorly by talking to the first delegation from the Hill about the Middle East. This seemed to some to be a diversion, if not a filibuster, but by the time the first Senators called on him, he seemed more confident and relaxed.

He took them up to the lovely sunny California room in the White House, he greeted them individually by name, and showed them his Hi-Fi console, and even said that when he used it, he preferred "tapes," because they were more audible and accurate.

Barry Goldwater, who comes out of this whole mess with more sanity and even humor than anybody else, helped ease the tension in the Senatorial delegation by giving Nixon a present when it was his turn to shake hands. It was a bottle of bourbon whisky with the new brand name of "Watergate," and the Senator from Arizona suggested that it might make a man feel better in times of trouble.

Thereafter, Nixon was apparently more at ease. He skipped that preliminary speech about the perils of the Middle East and the selfserving argument that the allies might lean toward Moscow if he were forced out of office, and went immediately to questions.

Members present agree that he denied all charges of personal involvement in the burglaries or the cover-up, and offered to hand over all documents relevant to criminal action by his associates, but what was more important about these confrontations, was that the president apparently removed many serious doubts about his own personal control of himself and his problem.

This, more than anything else, has been the concealed anxiety of congressional leaders. For weeks and even months, the president seemed isolated and defiant, brooding with his staff, and roving to his retreats in the Maryland mountains, Florida, or California.

Then suddenly he would appear to brief the leaders of Congress on the latest potential disaster. Two incidents illustrate the problem. When he called the congressional leaders to the White House to explain why he had called a worldwide alert of the armed forces at the critical point in the Middle East crisis, he was composed, solemn, and factual. –

PRESIDENT NIXON

Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts, the Democratic majority leader of the House, was so impressed by the president's presentation of the Soviet threat to intervene in the Middle East that when he got back to the house and found members saying the whole thing was a phony diversion from Watergate, he took to the floor and rebuked members of his own party.

Yet a few days before, in another meeting between the congressional leaders and the president, the reaction was quite different. At this meeting the purpose was to explain the political and strategic problem in the first stages of the Middle Eastern war. Secretary of State Kissinger was explaining the facts. The president was in a jovial mood, and kept interrupting and badgering Kissinger, kidding him as a "sex symbol" who was going to be celebrated as such in the centrespread of a popular magazine.

The congressional leaders were puzzled by this performance, and all the more puzzled when they got back to their offices and were greeted by special messengers bearing a letter from Vice-President Agnew saying that, by the time they received this, Agnew would have resigned and thanking them for their past support and courtesy. So why was the president so jolly, since he must have known what was coming?

This is the sort of thing that has been worrying people around here rather than the specific facts about whether the president knew about the burglaries or the cover-ups. And he is in better shape now with the people on Capitol Hill because he has come out of isolation, submitted to questioning, and handled the questions calmly and candidly.

Cool Manner

More important, he has handled himself under most difficult circumstances in a cool and rational manner. He hasn't offered any new information, or dealt with the substance of the charges. He hasn't answered the charges about Watergate, but he has reassured a lot of people about himself.

This has clearly helped him personally and minimized the deep but publicly unspoken doubts about his health, judgment and stability. Also, he has done so well in these confrontations with the Congress that he is now going sled-length the other way into speeches all over the place, or at least all over the south, flying to Florida to talk to the Associated Press managing editors, flying back to his place in Key Biscayne, and then up again and down again to Macon, Ga., back to Key Biscayne, and finally to Memphis to meet with the Republican Governors.

Keeping up with him is a puzzle, and who runs the government meanwhile, is not clear, but you can't blame a man for trying to save his honor and his life, and this is now obviously what he's trying, and trying with some success, to do.

Horror Stories on Housing

CALGARY — In the endless pawing that goes on over the entrails of the Canadian housing crisis, in search of causes of skyrocketing prices, it is passing curious that nobody has identified high wages, sloppy workmanship and lousy management, but not necessarily in that order. Instead, everybody seems to pick out high interest rates and exorbitant land costs and to look no further.

On the Calgary cocktail circuit Ukrainian jokes and Richard Nixon have been replaced by housing horror stories as conversation openers. Everyone who has bought a new house recently has a catalogue of them encompassing all the above categories. Here's the kind of thing you hear:

Dripping Water

"We were having lunch during the first heavy rain after we moved in. Suddenly we noticed water dripping on the centre of the table. When we looked up we saw it trickling down the chain of the light fixture. When we rushed to the attic we found water streaming through some faulty shingles then running down an electrical wire into the ceiling fixture box. Naturally we howled bloody murder and the builder sent somebody around to investigate. They fixed it — a shingling crew and an insulating crew who came back to replace the soggy insulation. And we once had the plumbers back, when they tore out the bathroom wall to get at a leak that turned out to be under the basin.

"After that dripping electrical fixture, it was a month before any of us could flick a switch without half expecting the house to go up in smoke."

In the house-building industry, Parkinson's third law seems to have universal application: Anything that can go wrong will go wrong. But in Calgary it has an added proviso: "Don't worry lady, we'll see it is fixed."

With building tradesmen's wages now flirting with $10 an hour stricter standards of workmanship might seem essential. But supervision seems to drop as wages rise and workmanship goes down with supervision. The result is the overrunning of cost estimates and the builder who fails to make generous allowances for "contingencies" will go broke.

Item: One excavating contractor dug a basement hole a foot too deep. That brought the basement windows a foot below grade level. A half dozen half-circle metal wells had to be specially made and installed to let in light and keep water out of the basement.

Item: A shingling contractor turned up with the wrong shingles and had a roof half-covered before the owner came by and pointed out the mistake. The shinglers, four of them, piled into their truck and took off to return the faulty material. When they came back the next day they simply laid the correct shingles over the others.

". . . we'll see it's fixed"

Item: A carpenter neglected to cut a hole in the floor to install a 3"x10" outlet. The omission was discovered by the rug layers who came to put down the carpet. Cutting holes was not their job. They left. Two days later a carpenter arrived with his portable saw. Getting it hooked up took 10 minutes, tidying up 10 minutes and going and coming from wherever he had been another hour.

Item: Completing the painting of the front door and trim brought the painters around on six separate trips, after four phone calls from an irate customer.

Item: The plasterers stuccoing an upstairs wall, scattered several pails of guck over the shingles around a dormer. It took crews from both the roofers and the plasterers two trips each to clean up the mess.

Item: The cement crew or the tinsmiths or the plasterers were responsible for a basement wall that leaked at the ground floor joists with every heavy rain. All took whirls at fixing the leak. The cement contractor made three passes at it. The leaks, though reduced, still persist.

Item: Installers of metal-framed windows lost the catches which enable windows to be raised and lowered. Four phone calls and three separate visits got the correct pins fitted properly.

Item: Cement crews laying sidewalks left openings for front driveways into garages. On a one-block stretch, all the openings were in the wrong places.

Callback Game

The name of this game is the newly coined noun "callback." It is the bane of the housebuilding industry. A faulty soldering connection in a bathroom pipe not only means a callback for the plumber. Carpenters, plasterers, tile layers will also be needed to complete the repair, with portal to portal pay at $10 an hour.

From the casual reaction of the builders to complaints, two conclusions follow. Callbacks are a recognized part of the game and can be expected to go on for at least a year after the houses are completed and occupied. There is ample provision in the margin of profit to take care of every conceivable kind of callback, including, presumably, from current price levels, the blowing away of the house itself.

And how big a bite to contingency allowances, profit margins and tradesmen's wages take from the home-buyer's dollar? Some indication can be obtained from this actual case of a young couple who cut the original cost of their home by leaving the upstairs roughed in but unfinished.

They called the original builder for a price to complete the upstairs. His bid was in excess of $3,000. The young couple did the job themselves, with the aid of a couple of handy relatives. It took them a little over a week out of their vacation and consumed just over $500 worth of material.

Editorial Correspondence

Takeover

Over the years I have been a frequent visitor to the Richmond Heights Private Hospital. When visiting you could feel the love, patience, warmth and understanding of the small staff for their patients as soon as you walked through the door. It was obvious too that this feeling was reciprocated by the patients and by their relatives.

On Oct. 31 this beautiful hospital was purchased by the provincial government and, apparently, given over to the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society to administer.

It is very disturbing to note how the atmosphere has changed in this short period since control was vested in this society.

On Nov. 1 it would seem this Juan de Fuca Society moved a number of their "Priority" staff into Richmond Heights Hospital, promptly re-named it Mt. Tolmie Hospital, and arbitrarily took it over from the incumbent administrator and nursing staff. They then commenced major structural changes and a complete re-organization without due regard for the patients or the relations and families of these patients. Any protests were rudely brushed aside by the new regime.

From a loving, warm and understanding home for the patients with a small dedicated administrative and nursing staff, it has now become a cold impersonal institution with hordes of highly paid help too busy building an "empire" for themselves to worry about the feelings of these old patients, many who have been there for years.

Such an upheaval is very disturbing to these sweet dear old people and it is very cruel. Richmond Heights Hospital and all it stood for and achieved is now as dead as its name.

I remember when the Hon. Denis Cocke announced the purchase of this hospital by the government he was very careful to state there would be no disturbance of the present patients and that the change-over would, necessarily, have to be a slow one—possibly several years. Apparently this has been ignored by the administration of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society.

At the same time the Hon. Minister also stated, in answer to a question, that the incumbent staff would be retained. Some of these staff have been there for years—they knew all the patients and the patients knew them and trusted them. They were highly regarded by the doctors, the relations and families and by the various Govt. departments responsible under the Hospital Act for the inspection of Private Hospitals.

Where are these people now?

It would seem that either their position has been made untenable under this new administration or they have been ousted by the "empire builders." If this is the case then it is a tragedy because people of this calibre, dedication and experience in geriatric care are very hard to find and to keep.

As a concerned citizen of this province it worries me that such a situation can arise. It is time someone at the top level looked into this before other private hospitals are bought and taken over so that these same mistakes are not made and "empire-building" allowed to prevail to the detriment and suffering of the patients. — Ms. S. Oak Bay property owners will vote tomorrow on two of the most important bylaws yet presented to the electorate of Victoria's premier suburb. The first is for the completion of the sewage systems of the municipality and involves an expenditure of $150,000 while the second calls for $35,000 for developing the water distributing system. One beneficial effect the passing of the bylaws would have, is that it would enable the council to proceed with the construction of permanent roads. It is the practise of the Oak Bay authorities not to do any road work until the pipes have been laid. The completion of the schemes covered in the two bylaws guarantees that the whole of the subdivided portion of the municipality, with the exception of the Uplands and the Hudson Bay property, would be perfectly supplied with water and sewerage accommodations.

Heath . . . cut through a myth

Britain: Things Aren't All That Bad

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

LONDON — It has suddenly become fashionable here to contrast the glittering pageantry of Princess Anne's wedding with the ominous declaration of a national fuel emergency and the newly imposed, record-high interest rates.

Poor, sick Britain, the conventional line runs. It can stage an archaic ceremony recalling imperial pomp but can't run a modern economy.

The reality, of course, is a lot less dramatic. If Britions are reluctant to cry, "I'm all right, Jack," they can with justice say, "Things aren't that bad, mate."

Like Anne's wedding, the fuel emergency declaration is a bit of political theatre. So far, it has created a maximum of newsprint and a minimum of distress.

The only sufferers are those who think the urban scene is enhanced by neon and electric advertising displayers and soccer fans who are now deprived of floodlit night games.

The government has even claimed that it is insulated from Arab oil cutbacks. Prime Minister Edward Heath has been saying so many things the Arabs want to hear about Israeli borders and Palestinian refugees that he has been telling parliament the country's oil supplies are assured.

The oil companies insist that this is wishful thinking, a commodity often in excess supply here. On Friday, Esso, the British subsidiary of giant Exxon and the second largest British oil firm, announced that it will cut deliveries to its customers by an unspecified amount recause of the Middle East crisis.

Other firms are expected to do the same, and the companies may yet force Heath to impose the rationing he has tried to avoid.

But the fact remains that the government's declaration of a fuel emergency was not triggered by Arab oil cuts but deployed as a manoeuvre in a war game Heath is playing with the coal mihers.

The best-paid miners, who earn a basic weekly wage of $88, want an increase of nearly 35 per cent. In the government's view, this would destroy what is left of its wage controls.

Heath's men are offering the miners a 16-per-cent increase and want to show the union they have some guns in reserve. The emergency declaration would permit the government to distribute and ration the substantial stocks of coal already mined, thus enabling the government to hold out longer against a threatened strike.

Just as important, from Heath's standpoint, is the battle for public opinion.

The government thinks it was forced to yield to the miners two years ago because the public supported their cause. Now it believes that the emergency declaration will force the miners to ply a constructive national role and will weaken popular sympathy for any shutdown.

All of this is the kind of gamesmanship that any modern government must engage in when it tries to run a high-employment economy and keep some lid on costs. It is in no way a measure of imperial decline.

Indeed, by most of the conventional standards, Britain's economy has been doing rather nicely over the past two years. Total output, even after the inflationary froth is blown off, has been rising by about four per cent a year. This figure would cause distress in Japan, but it is something better than stagnation.

Unemployment has been brought down from 900,000 to 550,000, about 2.4 per cent. This is not far from the bottom limit, and the help-wanted ads show that some shortages of labor already exist here.

To be sure, prices have been rising at a dismaying clip. Inflation shrinks the pound's buying power by nearly 10 per cent a year. But wages go up a bit faster, so real living standards improve slightly.

The frequent strikes, the long tea breaks and the slow pace at which British businessmen fill orders have earned this country a reputation for avoiding work. But during these past two years, the productivity of British labor — output per man per hour — has actually increased by six per cent annually, a handsome gain in any society.

It is unlikely that Britons are working harder: they value leisure too much for that. But if corporate managers are beginning to deploy their work force more efficiently, this society can have greater output with no increase in effort.

Apart from statistical abstractions, almost every visitor here is impressed by another index of well-being, the civil behavior of ordinary people.

The crowds that lined the Mall and Whitehall to watch the recent royal procession did not push or shove. In neighborhood shops, merchants and sales people trade small talk as well as goods and money. "Thank you dear" and "lovely" are the small change of ordinary dealings.

This is not the sort of thing that will lift growth rates to 10 per cent, but who now argues that growth rates measure contentment?

To be sure, Britain is no Utopia. Privilege and custom protect its leaders from the close scrutiny with which American public figures are fitfully examined. Corruption in government contracts and on the stock exchange is carefully screened from public view.

There is probably a greater concentration of wealth and, therefore, less equal distribution of income here than anywhere else in the west. That is one reason coal miners and others are militant; it is also a reason those in power welcome the wedding of a princess, a colorful event that bolsters privilege.

At the same time, there is an attachment here to common sense. It was Heath, after all, who cut through the myth that British strength had something to do with a fixed exchange rate for the pound. He simply let the currency float downward.

Like all solutions, this one has created new problems. It has meant that Britain must pay more for the raw material it imports, raw materials that were already rising in price around the globe. So the government has now responded with record interest rates to check a further fall in the pound and to prevent worsening the already worrisome inflation.

All of this may lack elegance, but practical economic policy-making is not a sign of decadence.

A New Kind of Job Test That Lures You to Bare Your Flaws

By JACQUES MERLINO
Le Monde, Paris

The nervousness experienced by people when they apply for a job needs no description — everyone can remember those uncontrollable flushings, the clammy hands, and the sudden paralysis of his faculties. There are so many things at stake: one's social standing, as reflected by one's job, one's self-respect, which can be destroyed at a stroke by a remark like "we will be getting in touch," and one's family, who do not dare ask how the interview went.

Everybody knows that in a society which has no time to spare for dropouts it is really unpleasant to be out of a job, even temporarily. So one might have expected personnel departments to make a special effort to ease the agony of job-seekers in an obviously difficult situation. Unfortunately, however, there has been an increasing use in France of psychological selection techniques, imported mainly from the United States. Here is an authentic account, with minor changes of detail, of one of these repugnant methods.

A Bare Room

At 9 a.m. on Wednesday, June 6, three men arrived at the head office of a large Paris company for psychological tests. A secretary showed them into a sparsely furnished, characterless kind of waiting room. Then a man and a woman came in (the psychologists of course), arranged the chairs in a circle, and asked the applicants to be seated. Without so much as saying good morning, introducing themselves, or even checking identities, the psychologists sat down on either side of the trio, the man slumped on his chair and gazing at his hands, the woman seemingly engrossed in what she could see through the window. The three applicants made no move, of course, even though the way they were being received struck them as decidedly odd, because they expected a barrage of questions. But such was not at all the intention of the psychologists.

The minutes trickled slowly past, and the candidates began to get uncomfortable and cast sidelong glances at one another. After a few minutes, the silence became unbearable: one applicant took the bull by the horns.

"Well, I suppose we're here to apply for the job you advertised. So perhaps we could introduce ourselves. As for myself, I've 15 years' experience in industry. I started with company X as a skilled worker, then I. . . ."

"We're not interested in the past," snapped one of the psychologists without looking up. "Oh, I see," replied the applicant, rather taken aback. "What do you want me to tell you then?"

Silence Fell

He got no answer. The two psychologists still seemed utterly engrossed in their own thoughts, and silence fell again. The applicant who had opened his mouth in vain turned to the other two.

The elder was sitting impassively looking out of the window, his arms folded. The other, who was a bit younger, gave a little sign of encouragement to the first applicant, and decided to say something too: "I think that what this lady and gentleman are interested in is not so much our professional experience or our desired salary. They want us to talk about ourselves."

"Go ahead, then," said the psychologist brusquely. The applicant, embarrassed, made a vague gesture. "I'm perfectly willing to talk as long as you ask me questions," he said. "When this gentleman tried to give you a run-down of his experience and qualifications a moment ago you said you weren't interested. This is the normal thing to do when looking for a job. If you don't want logical behaviour, what do you want me to say? Ask me specific questions and I'll answer them."

After a moment's silence, the woman psychologist spoke up for the first time: "In other words, what you're waiting for is an order."

"Oh no, far from it — I hate orders."

"Speak up then," said the other psychologist. The applicant shrugged his shoulders as if to show how ridiculous he thought the whole thing was. And again there was a long silence.

"And what about you? Have you nothing to say?" asked the psychologist of the third applicant.

"Who me? No, I'm simply looking at the landscape."

But after another silence during which everyone stared at him, he said: "I also applied for a job, but as an accountant. It's a job I know inside out, so there shouldn't be any problem. I didn't know your company, but I find your offices most impressive, with the garden and its fountains."

Fly on Ceiling

He fell silent again; one of the psychologists looked at his hands once more, and the other watched a fly crawl across the ceiling. The atmosphere became more and more oppressive. The first to crack was the aspiring foreman:

"Maybe you'd like me to tell you why I like my job. What interests me most is training young people, explaining how to make this or that part or to use a machine in the best way. It takes a long time to get to know the tricks of the trade, I can tell you, and I'm glad if, with my experience, I can save them time."

The aspiring accountant nodded agreement: "Teaching is no easy job. What you've got to have is authority. I had to deal with conscripts; they weren't as enthusiastic as regular soldiers, but they knew that if they didn't know how to detect a minefield it would be curtains for them, so they jolly well listened to me. Not like these university professors today who let their pupils insult them."

'Nobody's Lazy'

The youngest applicant chipped in: "I don't believe in authority. Young people must be given strong motivations. Nobody is really lazy or stupid. There are just people whose aspirations have been snuffed out — they should be encouraged instead."

The foreman did not agree: "A minimum of authority is vital if young people are to have any gumption at all. Otherwise, give them an inch and they'll take a mile."

The company again lapsed into silence, broken only by the welcome cries of children and the sound of a passing ambulance. The ticking of the clock on the wall again became noticeable.

The session lasted a full hour more, during which long periods of silence were punctuated by personal reminiscences and confessions of character traits. The youngest applicant had had family problems while an adolescent; the accountant's wife had been unfaithful and had left him; and the foreman was worried because the company for which he was working was planning staff reductions.

At the end of this strange two-hour session, without the psychologists having asked a single question, three normal, well-balanced men had opened their hearts and minds to two strangers and in front of two witnesses. When it was over, they could not understand how, when they had come for a job, they had behaved as though faced with a priest or a psychoanalyst which is precisely the purpose of such methods.

Perhaps the most disturbing aspect of the whole technique is the way it can put an applicant in a ridiculous position without his jibbing at such treatment. Psychologists are aware that finding a job is too important for anyone to risk passing up a possibility by walking out in a huff.

Hammer on Skull

The second reason why such methods seem repugnant is the shamelessness with which character flaws are bared in front of several witnesses. The psychological effect is not so much that of a slap in the face as of a sledgehammer on the skull. Such methods are disturbingly reminiscent of those used by totalitarian regimes.

The French deputies recently passed legislation to prevent the invasion of privacy. One cannot help having the uneasy feeling that they may have overlooked something.

Bullet Over Beast: A Triumph?

By COLMAN McCARTHY

A hunter's rifle sounded in the woodland, and its percussion tore through the air with a sound of terror.

A first blast went off. From what? A pump action shotgun or perhaps a 20-gauge lightweight.

Then another blast. The hunter apparently missed the first time. So he had reloaded and aimed again.

Still a third boom sounded. Then silence. The animal, whatever kind, must have been killed.

A few minutes later, one requiem finished, another series of shots rang out. Another death of the defenceless was recorded.

It went that way all afternoon — wanton man-made cruelty — or at least until I left the woods in need of air less heavy with the odor of slaughter.

We have been conditioned not to think of modern hunting in those terms — cruelty and slaughter — especially now, when the season is on and America's 20 to 30 million hunters, fun-hearted fellows, are going with bullets to the woodlands.

The propaganda of killing animals says that hunters are sportsmen, even though unarmed animals have absolutely no sporting chance for survival. Defenders of the hunting faith insist that an excitement exists in matching wits with a beast.

In the current Sports Afield, a hunter writes that he is under great risk, not the animal. Out for a shoot-em-up day in Alaska's Kashwitna Basin, he is stalking goats in a timberline. "The goat has too much going for him. He lives in savagely hostile terrain. His icebound peaks are storm centres. He is smart — a clever tactician . . . He has sharp ears and a good nose. Thus you earn your goat trophy. You work and maybe risk your neck. And this delights today's adventurous goat fans."

This is not a large figment of a small imagination. It choruses a common theme-song of hunting magazine stories: the peril of the chase, the imagined craftiness of the chased and the final bucking-the-odds triumph of bullet over beast.

It is as if the hunters sensed and needed to convince himself and us that it is indeed a fair fight. After all, cries this hunter, "goats are action critters. But also they are crafty. They make you think. A stalk for them can become as complicated as chess."

This armed Bobby Fischer at least went to Alaska, but the same pseudo-feisty spirit exists when even the common squirrel is hunted in a neighborhood wood.

"Finding the (squirrel) in that giant pine wasn't easy," writes a hunter in a gun magazine. "Marion finally spotted a glint of red near the top. 'You take him, Bob,' he said and pointed the squirrel out to me. I leaned against a small sapling for support, steadied the sights on the animal's head and gently squeezed the trigger."

This kind of moonstruck courage is called matching wits with wild animals. It is a myth, though, as the late Fred Myers of the Humane Society of the United States noted:

"Quite a few psychology laboratories have demonstrated conclusively that few wild animals, if any, have wits equalling those of a three-year-old child. One is forced to suspect that if the animals had wits of a much higher order — those of a five-year-old child for example — many 'sportsmen' would find the contest less pleasurable. What makes the contest 'fun' is the fact that it is a grossly uneven contest."

Arguments are occasionally raised against hunting, but the most persuasive case — if it is to stick — must be made by those who once hunted themselves but later realized the baseness of killing a living creature.

Such revulsion is not so unlikely. Aldo Leopold, a naturalist of the 1930s and 1940s who rowed aginst many currents, tells of his feelings when, as a boy he emptied his rifle into a mother wolf.

"We reached the old wolf in time to watch a fierce green fire dying in her eyes. I realized then, and have known ever since, that there was something new to me in those eyes — something known only to her and to the mountain. I was young then and full of trigger-itch; I thought that because fewer wolves meant more deer, that no wolves would mean hunters' paradise. But after seeing the green fire die, I sensed that neither the world nor the mountain agreed with such a view."

Another citizen who understood the cruelty of hunting was Henry Thoreau. He neglects the subject in Walden, leaving it for The Main Woods, an essay that shows some of the richest qualities of Thoreau's writing.

In a wood one day, he happens on, and joins, a roving party of moose hunters. They eventually kill one, but the coarseness of the event sickened Thoreau.

"This hunting of the moose merely for the satisfaction of killing him — not even for the sake of his hide — without making an extraordinary exertion or running any risk yourself, is too much like going out by night to some pasture and shooting your neighbor's horses. These are God's own horses, poor, timid creatures, that run fast enough as soon as they smell you.

"This afternoon's experience suggested to me how base or coarse are the motives which commonly carry men into the wilderness."

Is it possible to get such thinking into the heads of our young, before they get a philosphy of animal-killing in their hearts? It is not so easy as exposing them to the kind of moral feelings that Leopold and Thoreau expressed against deliberate destruction, because America lives easily with destruction that is not deliberate.

Flesh-eating citizens — despite a bounty of nutritious vegetables, fruit and dairy products — consume an annual 250 pounds of cattle, sheep, pigs, fish, chicken and turkey per capita, and do so with little thought that these animals once lived also and were likely raised and slaughtered in painful conditions.

It is hard to condemn the barbarity of hunting wolves or squirrels over a meal of a dead steer or pig, no matter how camouflaged the latter is with catsup, onions and french fries.

Another force that encourages hunting is the he-man cult ever in recruit of new members. The meek may inherit the earth, but not anytime soon, least of all not before the tough prove their manhood by stalking the earth and pumping bullets into squirrels. But what kind of masculinity is it that needs to take another life to enhance the image of its own?

Even common murderers kill other human beings for fathomable reasons: envy, rage, money. But these motives are absent in killing animals. After his experience with the hunters, Thoreau said that "Nature looked sternly upon me on account of the murder of the moose."

It should. Until our young are effectively taught that wild animals have as much right to life as tame humans, stern judgments need to be continually made against those who bang the guns loudly.

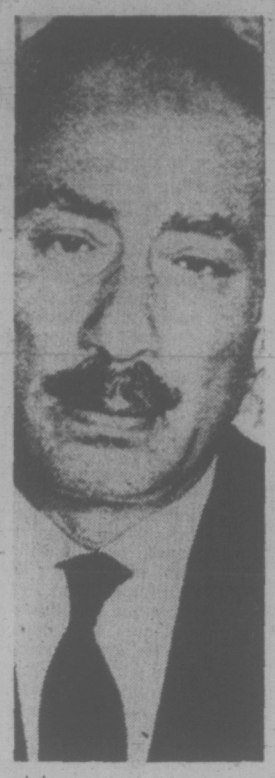
Reporting A Crisis: Oct. 25, 1973



Man in the middle: Kissinger flanked by adversaries Meir and Sadat

By Stuart Underhill

Thursday, October 25, was a newsman's dream — and nightmare. With the Middle East ceasefire barely two days old, and the Security Council fumbling for a more permanent solution amid big power dissension, the United States placed its military forces on alert.

The situation could and did give rise to the wildest conjectures. For the reporter it had all the elements of history in the making that help to make the profession so fascinating. But the imp of uncertainty which peers over the conscientious reporter's shoulder was never more in evidence as rumors flew and statements and counter-statements resounded.

The onus of reporting the day's mercurial events fell as usual on the wire services, or news agencies as some prefer to call them. Unobtrusive as they are, their communications reach everywhere and their influence cannot be over-estimated. Each day millions of people form their first impressions of world events from the reports of the wire services — reports often written and edited at high speed under bemusing pressures.

The giants of the wire service world are Reuters, based in London, and two with headquarters in New York, The Associated Press (AP) and United Press International (UPI). All three are concerned with the global collection and distribution of news.

The intent of this article is to examine how they rose to the events of October 25. The reader may like to consider the facts and try some do-it-yourself journalism.

Canadian newspapers have access to the reports of AP and Reuters through our own national news agency, The Canadian Press (CP). Its foreign desk sifts the dispatches that come rattling off the teleprinters of the two services — the automatically-operated teleprinters look like boxed-in typewriters — make their selections and speed them on their way over CP's own computerized communications.

Main Carrier

Virtually every daily newspaper and radio station in Canada, regardless of size, depends on CP for its non-regional news. A few subscribe in addition to the UPI wire, which reaches them via Montreal. CP maintains a corporal's guard of correspondents outside Canada to supplement its main supply of foreign news from AP and Reuters. They do not have much of a role in this story.

October 24 ended with sporadic outbreaks of fighting in the Middle East. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt was complaining of Israeli violations of the ceasefire and had asked U.S. and Soviet forces to step in and police the situation. A White House spokesman said promptly that the U.S. had no intention of sending troops to the Middle East and hoped that "other outside powers" would similarly abstain.

This nervous sparring did not prepare the world for the next development — reports in the small hours of Thursday of the U.S. alert. (UPI said the first tip-off was when highway police in Florida pulled up a speeding serviceman and heard his explanation for hurrying back to base.) The reports were soon confirmed but it was a long time before reporters could smoke any official comment out of Washington.

By mid-morning (eastern time) congressional leaders of both parties emerged from a briefing by President Nixon. Carl Albert, speaker of the House of Representatives, said when collared by reporters that it was "only a precautionary alert." He added: "The emphasis is on diplomacy at this time."

This was reassuring but less than two hours later Senator Henry Jackson of Washington (described by Reuters as "an influential member of the Senate armed services committee who frequently voices suspicion of Soviet moves in global diplomacy") jarred reporters by saying that the alert was in response to a "brutal" warning from the Soviet Union. It was a threat to send Soviet forces into the Middle East if the U.S. failed to join a peace-keeping mission, he said.

Sen. Jackson did not disclose the source of his information. He was not present at President Nixon's briefing, though this did not become clear immediately.

Still Humming

The wires were still humming with his remarks when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger began a lengthy news conference. It ranged over many aspects of the Middle East conflict and made many references to the U.S. alert. At one point he said it had been ordered because the U.S. thought the situation might be going beyond certain limits, but those limits had not been over-reached and there was a very real possibility that action in the Security Council could ease the situation.

Even as he spoke, the Security Council was doing just that. Before the day was out it had voted to send a United Nations emergency force to police the ceasefire. Soviet ambassador Jacob Malik agreed that the force should function without any big-power troops.

The tension eased, but many alarming questions remained. Was the U.S. alert a sober precautionary move, or did it result from some Soviet ultimatum or manoeuvre? Did the alert so intimidate the Soviet Union that it backed away from a confrontation or was there, in fact, no threat of a confrontation at all? Had a jittery U.S. called the alert on the basis of inaccurate information and then been stuck with it? And of course there was the suggestion, vigorously denied by the White House that President Nixon had called the alert to divert attention from his Watergate troubles.

The wire services poured out thousands of words that day, flavored with varying degrees of assumption and conviction. To assess them one by one:

Associated Press

If sheer volume were the yardstick for measuring good news coverage, AP would have swept the board. Between 5:20 a.m. (eastern daylight time, as are all times mentioned subsequently) when it first reported the alert and 2:40 p.m. it topped its original story nine times, often at considerable length. (This is the "lead" technique, a lead being designed to keep salient developments at the top of the story.) Simultaneously its mammoth Washington bureau was providing extensive coverage of congressional comment and the Kissinger press conference.

Like the other wire services, AP scrambled desperately to find some explanation for the alert. At 6:11 a.m. it was able to quote unidentified government sources as saying it had been ordered because of a warning from Moscow that Russia might send troops to the Middle East to enforce the ceasefire. AP adhered to this line for the rest of the day: that the alert was a big stick to wave the Soviet Union back from unilateral action.

At the same time, AP was at great pains to stress the precautionary nature of the alert and to point out that it was far from approaching a general mobilization.

They were confirmed in this approach by Rep. Albert's comments but badly rocked by Sen. Jackson's "brutal note" remarks which he amplified by saying "we were right at the brink again."

AP rushed this out as a bulletin which must have seemed to many newspaper desks to be a new introduction to the alert story; in other words, AP was taking Sen. Jackson very seriously.

But the matter was soon brought into perspective. Jackson was relegated to a less prominent position in another lead, and it was explained that he was not among the 14 congressional leaders who had been briefed by Nixon and Kissinger.

At 12:12 p.m. the Kissinger press conference was in progress and AP was bulletining his statement that the U.S. and the Soviet Union "have a special duty" to keep their confrontations within limits that do not threaten nuclear war.

As he moved into question time there was a confusion of bulletins and leads, often repetitive. The facts were all there: the U.S. was unalterably opposed to big power intervention in the Middle East . . . no confrontation . . . alert due to Soviet moves and ambiguity of Soviet intent . . . brusque rejection of the suggestion the alert was to distract Nixon's Watergate problems . . .

At 3:20 p.m. AP bulletined news of the Security Council's peacekeeping resolution, noting in the second paragraph that the Soviet Union "had been reported ready to send in its own troops" to police the ceasefire.

Now it was time for the Washington writers to pound out their roundups of the day's events, sifting facts and rumors and weighing their relative significance in an effort to provide comprehensive, balanced stories for morning papers of the 26th. AP lavished two roundups on its member newspapers.

One, headed "U.S. Alert," began: "Millions of American soldiers, sailors and airmen around the world were put on general military alert Thursday in an apparent warning to the Soviet Union to keep its troops out of the Middle East." It dealt primarily with the physical aspects of the alert, though Kissinger's explanations were included.

The second story, headed "Middle East Roundup," began: "U.S. military forces were ordered to alert status Thursday as the administration sought to keep the Soviet Union from intervening in the Middle East.

"The Russians later agreed to stay out of the area in favor of a peacekeeping force without big power involvement."

It then touched on the Security Council's action, the Kissinger press conference (at some length), the day's developments on the Middle East front, and related aspects. Sen. Jackson was all but overlooked.

United Press International

UPI's first bulletin on the alert, transmitted to its subscribers at 5:25 a.m., read: "For the first time since the 1973 Mideast war broke out, American troops in bases throughout the U.S. and Europe were put on the alert early today for possible mobilization. It was not immediately clear how many troops were involved in the predawn alert or how they would be used."

Careful background was added and shortly after 8 a.m. the story was topped with a lead that that began: "American troops and airmen, including nuclear bomber crews, were put on alert today both at home and at some overseas points. The move was said related to the Mideast situation."

A defence department spokesman was quoted as saying the alert was "purely precautionary and a routine thing to do in a situation like this." Another story which appeared about this time included a paragraph saying: "Some observers speculated the action putting troops and strategic bombing units on a state of readiness was being undertaken as a psychological gesture in response to movement of some Russian forces by sea closer to the war area."

UPI continued through the morning to stress the precautionary nature of the alert. Sen. Jackson's ominous remarks received only passing reference though later were used to lead off a roundup of congressional comment. It was pointed out that he was not at the White House briefing.

When Kissinger took the stage, UPI opened its running account as follows: "Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the U.S. is absolutely opposed to the introduction of any troops from any major power into the Mideast." The alert was referred to in passing some way down in the story.

New Introduction

The press conference eventually was tidied up with a new introduction which began: "With U.S. military forces around the world put on sudden alert, Secretary of State Kissinger cautioned the Soviet Union today to abandon any plan to send troops into the Mideast."

A late roundup for evening papers dealing with the alert moved about the same time. It began by linking the "precautionary" alert with "strenuous diplomatic efforts (by the U.S.) to prevent the Middle East ceasefire from falling apart."

Military sources described the alert as "the greatest since the 1962 Cuban missile crisis," the reporter said. He added that it was ordered "after the Soviet Union served notice that Russian troops might be sent to the Middle East for peacekeeping duty."

As the afternoon wore on the tone of the UPI stories became a little more feverish. A late top on the Kissinger story had him warning the Soviet Union "to abandon any intentions to send Russian troops into the Mideast, saying such a move could touch off a confrontation that would threaten all mankind."

A little later a final roundup for evening papers began: "The U.S. put thousands of troops on the biggest worldwide alert since the 1962 Cuban missile crisis today, warning the Soviet Union against any move to send troops to the Middle East. Russia announced in the United Nations it would not insist on sending them."

By morning paper time UPI was fully committed to the assumption that the softer Soviet line sprang directly from the U.S. alert. Its United Nations reporter said the Soviet Union had "bowed to U.S. pressure." A Washington story broke of President Nixon's "apparently successful attempt to head off threatened unilateral introductions of Soviet troops to the Middle East."

Reuter

It was 5.38 a.m. when the Reuter teleprinter chattered into action with an urgent story from Washington saying that a number of American military bases "reportedly" had been placed on alert. More than an hour passed before unidentified sources in the defence department confirmed the alert, which they described as "low level," meaning, Reuter explained, that no immediate emergency was in sight.

Soon after 7 a.m. another Washington story quoted Pentagon sources as saying the alert was "a precaution in light of the possibility that Soviet troops might be on their way to the Middle East."

Reuter mentioned Sen. Jackson's dramatic statement only in passing. Like the other wire services, it continued to emphasize the precautionary nature of the alert.

When the Kissinger press conference ended, Reuter summed up its voluminous coverage with this top: "U.S. troops were today placed on the alert throughout the world and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger warned the Russians against moving their forces into the Middle East."

The summary had government sources saying the Soviet Union "might" be sending troops into the Middle East, restated Kissinger's opposition to introducing the forces of major powers, and had him justifying the alert order on the strength of Soviet movements and the behavior of Soviet representatives in their negotiations with the U.S.

A later roundup for morning papers began: "President Nixon today put the U.S. armed forces, including nuclear bomber and missile crews, on the alert throughout the world and warned Russians not to send troops into the Middle East."

At one point the correspondent cited administration and congressional sources as saying that President Nixon had acted in the wake of reports that the Soviet Union was preparing to take independent action, and that Soviet troop carrier planes had already landed in Cairo. It was conceded that the planes probably contained no troops.

A subsequent introduction, written to incorporate the Security Council vote, included in its first paragraph the words: "the crisis was apparently solved."

Reuter always turns out a very fast, very straight report from the United Nations. It did so on Oct. 25, with little recognition of the crisis that was bubbling in Washingtoin.

In its definitive story of the Security Council's activities, Reuter began by stating baldly what the final decision had been and, after saying that the Council had acted swiftly "to defuse the grave Middle East crisis and risks of a U.S. - Soviet confrontation," outlined the policy speeches of individual Council members.

A little-noticed Reuter story during the day emanated from Moscow. After reporting the cancellation of a scheduled speech by party leader Leonid Brezhnev, it referred to the warmer relations that appeared to be developing between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, and went on:

"But this super-power harmony was disturbed Thursday when the U.S. and Soviet Union failed to reach immediate understanding on an Arab proposal for the armed forces of the two countries to police a ceasefire arrangement in the Suez Canal area."

Canadian Press

The Canadian Press foreign desk in Toronto, sampling the flood of copy that poured in from AP and Reuter, stuck almost exclusively with AP during the day. Not all the news the editors selected found its way west. Western papers are served on a single wire choked with national news, sports, all manner of features as well as foreign news. (Early next year fuller, more sophisticated communications now available in Ontario and Quebec will be extended to the Pacific coast.)

Thus, due to congestion, coverage on the West Wire on the day in question was slower and less comprehensive than that seen on the wires in eastern Canada. AP moved Sen. Jackson's "brutal note" comment at 11:30 a.m. It showed on CP's West Wire at 11:49. AP's new lead, balancing the impact of Jackson's remarks, came out of Washington at 11:47. Western Canadian newspapers didn't receive it until 12:17 p.m.

CP staff writers took up the story for morning papers of the 26th. This is how two of them saw the day's swift-moving events:

George Kitchen began his story from the United Nations: "The Security Council moved swiftly Thursday to organize a U.N. emergency force to police ceasefire lines in the Middle East as the Soviet Union back away from the threat of direct conflict with the United states."

Washington correspondent Peter Buckley began his roundup: "The U.S. Strategic Air Command intensified its vigilance in a worldwide military alert as diplomats continued to dissuade the Soviet Union from sending its troops to the Middle East.

"The predawn alert, order by President Nixon Thursday when it appeared that Moscow was about to take unilateral action, is likely to be eased with Moscow modifying its position and accepting a decision for a U.N. emergency force excluding big troops."

It would be well at this time to go back over the transcript of Henry Kissinger's news conference, remembering that apart from the president no one was better qualified to comment that day on the significance of the U.S. alert.

Ambiguity

It was a masterly exposition of U.S. policy both as regards the Middle East and the U.S. relationship with the Soviet Union. In outlining U.S. opposition to any great power intervening unilaterally in the Middle East, he said: "It is the ambiguity of some of the actions and communications and certain readiness measures that were observed that caused the president . . . to order certain precautionary measures to be taken by the U.S."

Later, in reply to questions: "When we took the precautionary steps . . . we did so because we thought there might be a possibility that matters might go beyond the limits which I have described. But we are not yet prepared to say that they have gone beyond these limits . . ."

And again: "The Soviet Union has not yet taken any irrevocable action. It is hoped that such action will not be taken . . . We are not seeking an opportunity to confront the Soviet Union, we are not asking the Soviet Union to pull back from anything that it has done."

And: "We are not talking of threats that have been made against one another. We are not talking of a missile crisis-type situation . . . we are talking about a precautionary situation, and not an actual one yet."

One of the great bugbears of the wire service business is the amount of rewriting that takes place. New leads on developing stories have to be prepared constantly for successive editions of newspapers. In the groping for fresh language the emphasis can change. Once a course has been set it can be carried to conclusions that were not intended at the outset.

Ideally, the lead story adduces evidence to support the conclusions advanced in its opening paragraphs. The risk in a situation like Oct. 25 is that conclusions tend to be drawn from evidence that is at best circumstantial.

If I had to grade the wire services on their day's work I would give AP a B—and the rest a C. AP would have got a better mark except for its verbal overkill and the Senator Jackson fumble.

The torrent of words and repetitive leads that poured out of AP's Washington bureau must have swamped the news desk of more than one newspaper that day. It was almost as if half a dozen reporters were pounding out the same story, with someone intervening now and then to try to pull the whole together.

But through it all AP resisted better than most the temptation to be stampeded into a cops and robbers type of coverage, with the good guys outgunning the bad.

Blare of Trumpets

UPI was less successful. The trumpets that announced the U.S. cavalry coming to the rescue could almost always be heard in the background and were blaring by the time the day's last stories were written. The correspondents may have had some inside information but the extravagance of language did not seem completely justified.

Reuters' performance is the most difficult to assess. The agency has a well-deserved reputation for caution which has won it many friends. It did not stray far from the straight and narrow path on October 25 and its final roundup of the day put the situation in perspective as well as anyone.

But there was a flabbiness to the Reuter coverage which might have explained why CP relied so extensively on AP. (Another explanation might be that the CP foreign desk was so overwhelmed by AP coverage that it had no time to read anything else.)

CP's own roundups did not help to put any of the day's events into perspective and the foreign desk would have done better to adhere to Reuters or AP.

But you be the judge. Then ask yourself if you could have done any better.

'BRUTAL NOTE' from Soviets was reported by Sen. Henry Jackson, a minor player in the major drama of the day.

Insurance Defence Filed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government has denied charges by North America's major car insurance firms that the compulsory British Columbia government car insurance scheme is beyond the powers of the Legislature to enact.

In a statement of defence filed in B.C. Supeme Court replying to the allegations of 37 insurance companies, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald argues that the legislation is totally within the government's constitutional authority.

The statement, prepared for the attorney-general by solicitor John McAlpine, says the legislation falls within provincial jurisdiction under the property and civil rights clause of the British North America Act.

It also claims provincial jurisdiction under the BNA Act's section awarding the provinces control over "generally all matters of a merely local or private nature in the province."

No trial date has been set, but both McAlpine and former federal justice minister Davie Fulton, solicitor of the insurance companies trying to upset the law, are hoping the trial can occur prior to March 1, 1974, the date government insurance coverage is to come into effect.

The insurance companies, in their statement of claim filed with the court, hold that the car insurance legislation infringes on the federal parliament's right to legislate in the area of competition.

They allege that the legislation illegally destroys their status and capacity to engage in the auto insurance business in B.C. and, in fact, forces them to "surrender their assets, and they are sterilized in their functions and activities."

The companies claim the legislation subjects them as dominion companies to confiscation of their assets without due process of law "and in a manner not in accordance with the law of the land."

The statement of defence questions many allegations of fact contained in the insurance company allegations, and gives notice that the companies will be called upon in trial to support such claims with evidence.

SHORTAGES IMPERIL PLASTICS

By JACK EGAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — Officials of the $20 billion U.S. chemical industry — beset by widespread shortages of most petrochemical raw materials and soaring costs even before the present crisis — are extremely concerned about the effects on production of any further outbacks of petroleum and its byproducts.

Members of the industry have been at pains to point out that where most petroleum is burned in one form or another as a source of energy, chemical companies rely on petroleum byproducts such as propane, benzene and naptha as the basic raw materials or "feedstocks" for producing everything from plastics and fertilizers to synthetic fibres and rubber.

At the same time, the chemical industry is extremely energy intensive in its manufacturing processes, using more natural gas and electricity than any other industry group, according to bureau of mines data.

Any reduction in available petroleum feedstocks and energy because of allocation, rationing and conservation measures therefore could have a significant impact on the production capability of the chemical industry, spokesmen for major companies and industry trade groups contend.

In addition, they emphasize the central role the chemical industry plays in the total economy with other major sectors including autos, plastics, pharmaceuticals and textiles heavily dependent upon chemical products to keep their own plants going.

The most serious casualty would be the 25-billion-pound-a-year plastics industry which a study estimates would suffer a $23 billion loss from a 15 per cent production cutback.

No one is yet predicting a reduction of this size is likely. But chemical industry analysts say it is a distinct possibility.

Tax Forms 'Easier'...Help at Hand

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The 1973 income tax form will be similar to last year's 13-page epic — except it will be a little easier.

The same 13-page form will go out to all taxpayers but this year the guidebook is coded with comments relating by number to each section of the tax form.

It will be easier to follow and more taxpayers will be able to do the work themselves without having to go to the expense of paying for storefront experts or special stock tax services.

"The new tax guide is a big improvement over last year," says Betty Chalmers, public relations officer for the Victoria taxation office.

"The majority of taxpayers will be able to fill out the forms themselves with the free assistance of the Victoria office. Only those people who normally would need an accountant should require the assistance of paid outside help."

She said the Victoria taxation office will have 12 telephone lines available plus 12 employees at the counter at all times to answers questions from the public.

"This should be enough to handle all the inquiries from the Victoria area. The service is free and callers can remain anonymous if they wish to. We are not permitted to fill out their forms but we can answer all questions step by step as they fill out their forms."

The 1973 forms have not been released to the public but they are the same as the 1972 effort which consisted of four basic pages plus a nine-page section for those involved in capital gains taxes and other unusual taxation problems.

Most taxpayers can throw away the nine-page section and just deal with the four-page basic form.

The revenue department has not yet decided upon an over-all slogan.

Last years effort — Close Up: It's Easier Than It Looks — drew the comment from local accountants "It is?"

The guide book slogan of "follow the blue" will be repeated this year and will be more meaningful because of the cross coding between the guide book and the tax form.

Taxpayers with capital gains will have to wrestle with their second year of a capital gains tax. Like last year, there is no necessity to include documents to prove stock or other transactions, although documents can be requested in spot checks by the revenue department.

The only people who really need the services of the new stock record plans are those whose trading has been complicated and they cannot sort it out for themselves. The vast majority of investors with six or less trades in a year likely would not need the stock tax services because the records need not be forwarded unless requested.

Under the capital gains tax requirements, investors must declare 50 per cent of their net gain as regular income for income tax purposes. If they have a net loss they may claim 50 per cent of the loss against regular income on their tax form.

There is no limit to the amount of gain that may be taxable but the amount of loss that can be claimed is limited by law.

The maximum net loss in capital gains that is of value to the taxpayer is $2,000 of which 50 per cent of $1,000 may be written off against regular income.

A man with taxable income of $10,000 and capital gain of $2,000 and a loss of $4,000 has a net loss of $2,000 and he can claim 50 per cent of that or $1,000 against his $10,000 income, leaving him with a taxable income of $9,000.

On the surface it seems simple but the new rule has kept Mrs. Chalmers and other officials of the Victoria office busy answering questions on how the rule applies in other specific cases.

In an effort to head off some of the problems, Mrs. Chalmers and other Victoria taxation office experts are available to speak to groups of 20 or more.

The staff is always inundated with speaking requests near income tax deadline and they hope some groups will approach them in December and January, rather than join the last-minute rush.

Among the points covered in the talks are ways to avoid the most common errors in income tax forms.

Of more than 9 million income tax forms assessed by July 9, there were errors in 2.1 million.

—Largest number of errors — 1.6 million — occurred in the area of the return where taxpayers calculate their tax.

—There were 649,000 errors made in calculating Canada Pension Plan overpayments.

—There were 437,000 mistakes in relation to the employment expense deductions — mainly taxpayers not claiming the deduction, a new provision on the tax form.

B.C. Rail Manager Resigns

B.C. Railway general manager and vice-president J. S. Broadbent has resigned.

Premier Barrett said Tuesday Broadbent approached him earlier in the day and "offered the suggestion he be relieved of his duties because of his health and on his doctor's advice."

Broadbent will continue to work "at his own pace" as a consultant to Transport Minister Robert Strachan and has already been doing some work in that capacity, Barrett said.

He will continue at his $35,000 a year salary.

Under the Social Credit administration Broadbent had been B.C. Rail's sole vice-president as well as general manager, but last March Barrett, as president of the railway, announced Broadbent would become vice-president in charge of development and research while M. C. Norris would be vice-president in charge of operations.

Norris will now take over all the functions formerly held by Broadbent.

The premier said he has asked Norris, who will now be considered executive officer of the railway, to prepare recommendations for restructuring the senior staff of the government corporation in order to cope with the growing responsibilities and work in administration.

On other railway matters, Barrett said the shortage of boxcars on the government rails may cost the province as much as $2 million.

He said he still contends the national railways are not making an effort to help the B.C. Railway cope with the shortage.

A Rapid Idea

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Building Owners' and Managers' Association of Vancouver has urged the provincial government to use a portion of the gasoline tax to finance a rapid transit system in the Greater Vancouver area rather than imposing a property tax.

N. Cowichan Council 'Arrogant'

North Cowichan council was accused in a B.C. Supreme Court hearing Tuesday of arrogantly using its powers against the public interest when it decided to permit a massive housing development on Mount Tzouhalem at Maple Bap.

Victoria lawyer J. J. Gow, representing 96 Maple Bay residents who want the court to quash the bylaw allowing Kingsview Properties Ltd. to develop 1,250 lots on the 500-acre site, told Mr. Justice McKay the council had "stubbornly refused throughout public meetings to explain to the public why . . . it so ardently desired to enter into this land-use contract."

This, Gow said, was an arrogant attitude.

"The members of the public whose property rights are likely to be affected by the land-use contract are entitled to know the grounds of the land-use contract."

By not outlining at a public hearing its reasons, Gow argued, the council had not performed the duties required by the Municipal Act.

He criticized the council for not studying the possible consequences of the development.

When Gow said the council had not described how it would supply water to the homes, the judge asked if he was saying the seven aldermen are "idiots" who do not know their own water supply.

The answer "yes, yes, yes" came from about a dozen persons sitting in the back of the chamber.

In opposing Gow's arguments, council lawyer David Williams said the development is needed to provide "decent residential land for people who want to move into the municipality to live."

Williams said it was necessary to have "residential areas concentrated in order to achieve efficiency."

The aldermen, Williams said, did not have to say at a public meeting why they supported the development.

They had listened to the residents at four public meetings and were not obliged to debate with the public by entering a "bear pit."

The hearing, which resumes today, is the second time the proposed development has been before the Supreme Court.

Paving Plant Wins Emission Permit

OK Paving Ltd., which won a brief battle with the city of Victoria two months ago over restoration of a building permit for a proposed paving plant, has now received an air emission permit from the Pollution Control Branch.

The firm's president, Buncey Sanghia, said today the PCB permit to operate the $300,000 plant on Store Street under strictly controlled standards was issued last Friday.

"As far as I'm concerned we're now in business," he said, although construction had been held up by recent bad weather and the plant would not be operational for at least two months.

The city first issued and later cancelled a building permit for the asphalt paving plant. The firm countered by launching a legal action claiming substantial damages, and within a week of the writ being filed, the city reinstated the permit.

Sangha said the city solicitor has indicated the company will have to abide by all relevant bylaw requirements.

"They're going to be watching us very carefully," he said, but added he has no fears on that score, as the burners and other equipment meet the highest possible pollution standards.

OUTSTANDING contributions to her community during the past year have won Catherine Shortt, 17, of 1798 Elgin, a plaque and $100 from the Westminster Regiment Association. Miss Shortt was active on Oak Bay secondary school's student council and newspaper and she co-ordinated a number of athletic events and activities in Oak Bay.

B.C. Helping Nomad Tots

British Columbia has given $5,000 to the provincial UNICEF committee for the relief of children in Mauritania and Mali.

The grant from the Agricultural Aid to Developing Countries and World Disaster Areas Fund will be used to buy blankets for distribution to children of nomad families, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday.

The two African nations have suffered prolonged droughts forcing nomadic families to migrate to the cities where they face a severe winter making blankets a top priority.

Cattle Egret Seen at Sooke

By HAROLD HOSFORD

A rare Cattle Egret has been sighted on the farm of Artie Wickheim at Sooke.

The bird had been feeding with the Wickheim cattle for several days when Vic and Peggy Goodwill of Victoria saw it and confirmed its identity.

The sighting is a first for Vancouver Island and possibly British Columbia. An earlier observation from the Fraser Delta has not been confirmed.

Cattle Egrets are small, white, heron-like birds which are natives of Africa. They somehow made their way across the Atlantic to South America late in the last century. Since then they have been spreading north and are now residents of most of the southern United States.

They reached Canada in 1952, in Newfoundland, and by 1970 had been recorded in every Canadian province. It was in that year that the unconfirmed Vancouver sighting took place.

By 1962 they were nesting near Toronto and 10 years later had crossed the 60th parallel to be recorded near Fort Smith in the Northwest Territories.

2,500 Likely At SC Meet

Social Credit party members from around the province began gathering in Vancouver today for the biggest and possibly the most important convention in the history of the B.C. party.

More than 2,000 Socreds are expected to attend at least part of the three-day rally and the Hotel Vancouver is preparing to handle up to 2,500 participants and spectators.

The convention begins with the women's auxiliary Thursday morning but the early proceedings will be largely perfunctory as all eyes focus on Saturday's leadership race — the race which will determine B.C.'s new leader of the opposition.

It's the first leadership contest since 1952 when the fledgling Socred party chose W.A.C. Bennett.

Bennett's son, Bill, the new MLA for South Okanagan, is considered the leading contender but four other MLAs and a Burnaby party member are also in the race and many observers say anything could happen, especially if Bennett does not win on the first ballot.

The other ontenders are: Bob McClelland (Langley) Jim Chabot (Columbia River), Harvey Schroeder (Chilliwack), Ed Smith (North Peace River) and Burnaby chartered accountant James Mason.

After the official opening and presentation of a new party constitution Thursday, delegates will spend Friday discussing resolutions and electing a new league president to replace long-time president George Driediger.

Former cabinet minister Grace McCarthy is the only Socred to declare she will try for the presidency but Ken Kiernan, another former minister, has been doing most of the organizational work for the convention and may enter the race.

By last weekend more than 800 Scoreds had already preregistered for the rally, Kiernan said, compared to the 400 or 500 total delegates attending previous conventions. A total of 2,750 delegates — 50 from each provincial riding — is entitled to attend.

He said few substantial resolutions have been submitted from constituencies since mose delegates are concentrating their energies on the leadership race.

Leadership candidates will address delegates Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. The voting begins 2.15 p.m.

Firm Staying In B.C.

Co-operative Fire and Casualty insurance company is still in the general insurance business in British Columbia, although it has pulled out of the car field, Donald Yocom of Vancouver said today.

Yocom, Canadian manager of Safeco Insurance, said he inadvertently included Co-operative Fire and Casualty in a list of companies that have pulled out of B.C. The article was in the Nov. 17 issue of the Times.

The other companies, All State, State Farm, Home of New York and Liberty Mutual are leaving the province while Co-operative Fire and Casualty is pulling out of the car insurance business ahead of the March 1 government takeover.

Yocom has been appointed by B.C. insurance companies to negotiate details of the transition period with the provincial government.

Plane Trees To Go

Plane trees planted on Shelbourne between Feltham and Kenmore as a memorial to First World War veterans will come down but felling day is probably years away.

Saanich council's public works committee decided Tuesday to endorse municipal engineer J. R. Daye's recommendation the stretch of Shelbourne be widened to 56 feet in the future.

This would mean felling both rows of trees in the area.

Daye recommended new trees be planted clear of the new curbs and sidewalks so that when the eventual road widening takes place the new trees will be well along in growth.

"This isn't an easy decision to make," Daye said, "Half a dozen people in my department have been scratching their heads and wondering which is the best for Saanich and, in my opinion, this is the way to go."

The other alternative, Daye said, would have been to continue the dual carriageway that is now being installed north of Kenmore as a means of saving the trees.

Daye pointed out, however, that to do this between Feltham and Kenmore would mean buying a 25-foot strip of land on the west side of Shelbourne, which would cost some $52,000.

It would also require the removal of "two quite valuable dwellings" and the elimination of one lot in a proposed subdivision, the depreciation of value of one other dwelling in the area and commercial greenhouses in the area, as well as road costs.

"This is going to cause a hell of a lot of static I know," said Ald. Bill Noel, "but I'm prepared to stand up to it. The plane trees there now have been massacred by B.C. Hydro. There are other trees that would be better and there could be a rededication if necessary."

"What is the hurry in widening the road now?" Ald. Edith Gunning asked. "Let's not give the idea that the trees are coming down right away."

Daye said it was necessary to set a long-range policy now because subdevelopers were coming into his office and needed guidelines.

Rose by Any Name Adds Up to MVP

Rose, who hit .338 this year in leading the National League in batting for the third time in his career, received 12 votes for first place and a total of 274 points.

Stargell, the league leader in home runs with 44 and runs batted in with 119, collected 10 first-place votes and 250 points.

It was the tightest MVP race since 1969, when Willie McCovey of San Francisco Giants edged Tom Seaver of New York Mets by 22 points.

Rose and Stargell were the only players named on all 24 ballots cast by the committee, which consisted of two writers from each league city.

Two other players who each received one first-place vote finished third and fourth in the balloting — San Francisco Giants outfielder Bobby Bonds and Cincinnati second baseman Joe Morgan. Bonds collected 174 points, and Morgan, one of four Reds in the top 10, collected 102 points.

Montreal Expos' relief ace Mike Marshall, who finished second to Seaver in this year's Cy Young Award voting, completed the top five with 93 points.

Others in the top 10 were Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals, with 65 points; Cincinnati's Tony Perez, 59; Seaver 57; Ken Singleton of Montreal Expos, 52, and Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, 41, last year's MVP.

"It's great to be No. 1," Rose said. "It's the biggest honor yet. I'm thrilled and happy."

Rose wasn't completely surprised, though.

"I thought I had a shot at it, although I wouldn't have felt bad if Stargell had won it. Homers always talk," said Rose.

Rose, 31, who came close to winning the MVP award in 1968 when he finished second to St. Louis pitcher Bob Gibson, boldly announced that he wasn't finished winning awards.

"I'm going to win every honor yet," said the fiery Rose, who boasted that he was the first singles hitter in baseball making $100,000 a year.

And Stargell Says He Doesn't Want It

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A disillusioned Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates doesn't want the National League's Most Valuable Player award if he has to break Roger Maris' record of 61 home runs to get it.

"If it has to be that obvious, they can keep it," Stargell said Tuesday night after learning by phone from a reporter that he had been edged by Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds in the MVP voting.

"If they had no other choice but to give it to me, like if I broke Maris' record, then I wouldn't want it," he added.

Stargell's MVP sentiment is complex. It runs deeper than sour grapes, and it stems from his belief that there are no fixed criteria for determining the winner.

That's why he side-stepped the point-blank question of whether he felt he deserved the award over Rose.

"I can't really say I deserve it because I don't know what the standards are," he said in a calm, even voice.

That question first arose for Stargell in 1971 when he led the Pirates to a division title but finished second in the MVP voting to Joe Torre of the also-ran Cardinals.

He said the answer he got then was that Torre had a better individual season, although St. Louis didn't win the title. Yet Stargell feels he may have been bypassed again this year because the Pirates finished third. A contradiction?

"I think it is," Stargell said, "and I'd like to see it changed . . . Somewhere along the line they're going to disappoint a guy who doesn't take it as well as I do."

Wings Flying for Alex

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings continued their recovery from an early-season tailspin Tuesday night, although they were hardpressed to defeat the determined Los Angeles Kings 6-5 for their fifth victory in their last six National Hockey League games.

Toronto Maple Leafs also bolstered their position in the East Division with a 4-2 victory over the last-place New York Islanders. No other games were scheduled.

The Red Wings, under the gentle touch of their new coach and retired team-mate Alex Delvecchio, climbed into sixth place, three points back of New York Rangers and only four behind Buffalo Sabres, currently holding fourth and last playoff berth.

For the Kings, it was their fifth loss in succession as they embarked on a five-game road trip.

The Red Wings, who have shown a lot more enthusiasm in the locker room and on the ice since Delvecchio took over from rookie coach Ted Garvin, led 5-3 going into the final period Tuesday, but the Kings were dominating the play and Whitey Widing cut Detroit's lead to 5-4 at 13:22.

Nick Libett collected his second goal of the game and his 11th of the season at 18:14 to restore the Wings' two-goal margin, but Bob Murdock hammered in another goal for the Kings with seconds remaining after they removed their goaltender for an extra attacker.

Tord Lundstrom, a rookie from Sweden, registered his first NHL goal when he scored for the Wings in the second period.

It was the 15th time the Kings have gone without a victory on Detroit ice.

Leafs' victory capped a five-game road trip in which they gained seven of a possible 10 points and it gave them a three-point lead over third-place Montreal Canadiens.

A pain-killing needle to Borje Salming's back kept him off the ice for most of the third period, creating some problems for Toronto coach Leonard (Red) Kelly, who had only three other defencemen available, because of injuries to Willie Brossart, Bob Neely and Brian Glennie.

Ian Turbull, Mike Pelyk and Jim McKenny scored extra duty and occasionally Darryl Sittler, who got one of the Leafs' key goals in the second period, filled in at the blueline.

"It hit me just when I was turning—the same kind of pain that I had with my slipped disc in training camp," Salming said.

Earl Ingarfield, Islanders' director of player personnel, who took over the coaching job from Phil Goyette last season, was gloomy.

"They've worked very hard with little to show for it," he said. "It's starting to get to our guys a little."

The Islanders have won two, lost eight and tied seven games this season.

In tonight's action, Montreal Canadiens will visit Minnesota to test the North Stars' coaching debut of Parker MacDonald, who succeeded Jackie Gordon on Tuesday. Gordon resigned under pressure of nerves, he said.

"The pressure got to my nerves more and more the past few weeks," he said at a news conference. "It was my nerves more than anything else. I was not getting the message to the players."

Boyd: The Improbable World of the Canucks

This is the tale of "Captain Kurt," "one-punch" and "super-pest," and a hockey goalkeeper who prided himself on his capability to consume drambuie. He once downed 19 after dinner, and this is believed to be a B.C. record.

It is also the Vancouver Canucks Story by Denny Boyd (McGraw-Hill Ryerson Ltd., $6.95), a most lively and revealing history of life with an expansion National Hockey League Club. All three hilarious and intriguing years of it. Make that three, going on four.

Boyd's realm of readers will demand to know who the insurgents were when open rebellion was rife, the story behind the story of the missing $3 million, the real reason Joe Crozier was fired. He doesn't let them down. He spills a few truths, too, on some of the team characters, including management. And that's good. Because it's behind the scenes where the Canucks have made their biggest mark.

The players — their problems; the coaches — their lack of discipline; the owners (the men from Medicor) — their grief, plus the morass of red tape and frustration that was part of the finally successful franchise bid—Boyd gets a little of it all.

He only succumbs to the lure of the paste pot because of sheer necessity — how else can you spell "tradition" in just three short years?—but he does it commendably: Log book, year one; log book, year two, statistical dates to remember.

But what he has really done is to start sort of an open-end epistle with more hot chapters to follow. Why stop with last year's open revolt against coach Vic Stasiuk?

Chest Out . . . Pants Down

Why indeed? Because this spring when rookie Dennis Ververgaert was being introduced to the media, vice-president Coley Hall asked the husky youth to take off his shirt and to show the press his pectorals. The press asked Hall to do the same. Hall complied, sucked in his tummy and his pants fell to his knees. The next day, whose picture hit the front pages of Vancouver dailies? The Canucks' new strong man—Hall—chest out, pants down.

"Captain Kurt" is the team's old pro and leader, Orland Kurtenbach, beset by many injuries during his time with the club; "super-pest" is Andre Boudrias, until expansion a journeyman player, but now the delight of the faithful; and "one-punch" is Bobby Schmautz, the best 155-pound hockey fighter, pound for pound and punch for punch in the entire league. The drambuie champ was George Gardner who once, instead of asking for a bonus for goals-against or shutouts, made a deal with general-manager Bud Poile that if he lasted the season then a $5,000 bonus would be the only extra reward he wanted. Which is why he refused to play in the minors when Poile later asked him to. To cap it, Gardner then defected to the World Hockey Association.

Characters, sure, and then there were those men from Medicor.

It was Tuesday, Feb. 22, 1972, when Poile buzzed for his public relations man, Greg Douglas. Tuesday was hockey-luncheon day and Poile asked: "What should we talk about today?" Douglas reminded Poile the guests were a group of sportswriters and broadcasters from Seattle, who were visiting in connection with the Canucks' purchase of the Seattle franchise in the WHL. Then the news hit the fan. President Tom Scallen and vice-president Lyman Walters had been charged with the theft of $3 million.

Good News . . . And Bad News

If that was news, everyone flocked to lunch to see how the Canucks would handle it; and in true tradition, they did it up proud. Babe Pratt, Poile's assistant VP in charge of flacking, when emceeing his boss, quipped: "I'd like to introduce our GM and bail bondsman, Bud Poile." It got the laugh. But Poile topped it when he said: "I've got some good news and some bad news. The good news is that our owners have been charged with swiping $3 million. The bad news is that we have to play Boston tonight."

Boyd started his sports-writing career here at the Times and among his best stuff was describing the grease Flo Chadwick was using on her buttocks as she trained for her attempt to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Since then he's been a sports columnist and a gossip man on the Sun, dabbles with a cooking column, and has turned author. His first effort was A History of Hockey in British Columbia.

He knows athletes. He should. He was once hung up in the Nanaimo lacrosse team's dressing room to be used as a punching bag, before cooler heads prevailed; and the story is also true that he was challenged by some of the CFL's biggest tackles in his time. Boyd might go about 156 on his best day, so he doesn't lack courage.

He wasn't always aloof to the petty temptations which beset a byliner and gossip columnist either; and he has stumbled once or twice. But now he's back on track and it's nice to see. Juggling words is one of the things he does best even in that improbable world of the Canucks. They should do as well.

Canuck Profit Shows Big Dip

VANCOUVER (CP) — Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd. reports net income dropped to $489,180 for the year ended June 30, 1973, compared with $1.1 million in 1972.

The parent company of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League said earnings were 49 cents a share, compared with $1 a share last year.

No Postponement

ZURICH (AP) — Chile has rejected a Soviet bid for postponement of their second leg World Cup qualifying game, the International Football Federation (FIFA) said today. The FIFA announcement said a "final decision on the matter" will have to be taken at a meeting of the FIFA organizing committee Jan. 5.

Cougars Put Up Game Show But Flu and Calgary Prevail

Bouts of the flu helped end Victoria Cougars' unbeaten streak in Western Canada Hockey League action at four games Tuesday night in Calgary.

Calgary Centennials, the Western Division leaders, exploded for six goals in the third period after wearing down an undermanned Victoria club and went on to pick up an 8-3 decision.

Cougars, unexpectedly down to only eight forwards before the game, had only seven after the first few minutes of the second period but didn't yield until the last half of third frame.

Troubles began when winger Brian Day stated he felt he had recovered sufficiently from an attack of the flu to play. The Cougars then sent winger Danny (Butch) Stewart, who was slated to replace Day, back to Nanaimo Clippers.

Upon arriving in Calgary, Day's condition worsened and centre Al McLaren was also on the sick list.

Both players had to sit out the game and coach Ollie Dorohoy was forced to go with two lines. Despite this handicap, Cougars took a 2-1 lead into the second period and a 3-2 edge into the final 20 minutes.

Ron Pool, Mel Bridgeman and Tim Williams each scored for Victoria.

Pool, however, was slapped with a major and a game misconduct early in the second period after playing 15 games without drawing a penalty of any kind. He was ticked off for entering a fight between clubmate Don Dziadyk and Rick Hodgson.

Cougars contained the Calgary attack well into the third period, even after Rick Shinske had notched the tying goal and Grant Mulvey got the go-ahead tally less than three minutes later.

Then they collapsed suddenly as Dan Mandryk, Mike Rogers and Don Ashby pounded in goals between 11:25 and 12:20 to put the game out of reach.

Rogers' goal was the 100th of his WCHL career. But jubilation in the Calgary dressing room was dampened somewhat by the loss of John Phillips, who broke a leg falling into the boards in the second period. He will be out of action several weeks.

In other games Tuesday, Swift Current Broncos snatched a 4-3 victory from Regina Pats and Saskatoon Blades topped Winnipeg Clubs, 4-2.

DRUG USE WORSE

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A secret state report concludes that drug use on the San Diego Chargers football team is worse now than in 1969, when a player says he performed under the influence of drugs, the Evening Tribune said Tuesday.

Lineman Houston Ridge claimed in a lawsuit that he was injured because of team-administered drugs. He was awarded $300,000 in a court settlement last May.

In depositions taken in the trial, Charger officials were accused of passing out as many as 10,000 high-powered pep pills, tranquillizers and other drugs during a one-year period.

Although reports by investigators for the state board of medical examiners are still under study, the San Diego newspaper said it obtained a copy of the pharmacy board's report which says, in part:

"As far as the distribution of drugs occurs today for the Chargers, everything appears legal. However, the basic problem exists . . . the condition regarding drugs is worse today than it was in October, 1969, when Mr. Ridge was injured.

"The state has cut off the legal outlets of drugs for these players on the Chargers," the report went on.

"Unfortunately, some of the players are self-medicating themselves now with illicit, questionable drugs without any medical supervision."

Blades Now Knights in Jersey

NEW YORK (CP)—A costly experiment ended Tuesday for the Golden Blades, New York's bankrupt World Hockey Association team. The league moved them to Cherry Hill, N.J., and fired the bosses.

The WHA, by creating a new franchise, put the Golden Blades into a smaller and cheaper site near Philadelphia, where they will play 29 home games left on the schedule.

They will be known as the Jersey Knights, their third name in 13 months.

New coach Harry Howell replaces his old friend, Camille (The Eel) Henry, who will assist the new general manager, WHA administrator Marvin Milkes.

Howell will continue to play defence as well. Milkes was the original general manager of the team.

The entire Golden Blades' front office is out of the picture, with general manager Jerry DeLise the main casualty.

DeLise, who spent 12 years as special assistant to general manager Sam Pollock of Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, joined the Golden Blades as managing director last summer.

That was when Lee Matison, a record company promoter, and Ralph Brent, a broadcaster, convinced now-retired WHA president Gary Davidson they represented a group with enough cash to run the club.

The league had been running the club for seven months because a previous group had gone broke.

Brent became president. The new syndicate bought the WHA franchise for $1.5 million, renaming the original Raiders the Golden Blades.

On the first pay day of the season, Brent disclosed there was no money to pay the players, already fuming over some of DeLise's dealing with players. A $250,000 cheque from a potential investor bounced.

The WHA quickly took over the franchise and payed the players. But the league refused to pay other bills.

A dozen workers in the Blades office will be out of jobs soon after only a couple of months in their posh surroundings, sub-leased at a reported cost of $3,000 a month.

The Knights will be owned by the league which, under its bylaws, took over the Golden Blades when the $40,000 semi-monthly payroll could not be met by Brent and his syndicate.

The syndicate could not, or did not want to, meet the $8,000 advance required by Madison Square Garden for administrative expenses to cover Sunday's game against Quebec Nordiques.

Garden officials said they were willing to put off the reduced rental of $10,000 a game for the arena but they insisted on the expense money.

"They didn't come up with the money," said Mike Burke, president of the Garden, after a Tuesday deadline passed.

But it will be much cheaper to operate out of Cherry Hill, where the costs a game are about $3,000 compared with $18,000 or more at the Garden.

The new Cherry Hill price structure for tickets will list seats at $5 and $4 compared with $9 tops at the Garden.

Baldwin said the league will honor refunds to the 2,000 persons who purchased season tickets.

Forest Service Expands Recreation Involvement

stewart lang

British Columbia's forest service is rapidly and quietly becoming involved in the public recreation aspect of timberland management in areas under its jurisdiction.

Two years ago, the program was still in the planning stages.

Harry Marshall, the recreational forester co-ordinating the operation in the planning section of the service management division in Victoria, was concerned at that time with building a firm foundation for establishing recreational sites throughout the province.

At this date, building activities are well under way.

During 1972, the first field year, the forest service constructed 286 sites and added approximately 280 this season. Marshall expects this number to rise to 800 by the end of 1974.

"Our concept of developing sites is unchanged," he said.

Following public demand rather than creating it is the watchword. The forest service tries to find out where the public is going, what it is doing, where use problems arise and whether or not someone else is looking after the recreational needs of the area.

"If a spot on a lake is obviously popular with the public, we improve that site in a minimum way to keep it rustic," Marshall explained.

Improvements to a site may include ground cleanup, some thinning and limbing of trees, sprucing up beaches as well as providing toilets and garbage pails. Added amenities such as boat-launching ramps and fireplaces are provided where needed.

Because the camping season also coincides with the fire season, the forest service relies heavily on patrolmen and summer student help for taking care of sanitation and other recreation-oriented activities.

Each of the six forest districts in the province — Vancouver (which includes Vancouver Island), Kamloops, Cariboo, Prince George, Prince Rupert and Nelson — has a forester and a technician "primarily concerned with recreational planning and field organization."

Personnel within each ranger district are involved with the district staff in planning where the sites should be and how they are laid out.

The planning phase brings the recreational program into the over-all pattern, which involves such things as timber management, watershed management and fish and wildlife.

"It just doesn't exist on its own. It has to be balanced and made to fit the best use of the area," added Marshall.

Vancouver Island has 26 sites and an additional 39 are expected to be ready by the end of next year.

Development has been most concentrated in the Sayward Forest area near Campbell River and around Cowichan Lake. Activities in the Langford, Alberni and Port McNeil ranger districts have had less emphasis because of low use or the involvement of other departments or companies in the recreation picture.

The only two sites in the province built and operated on a shared basis with timber companies are located at Nitinat Lake.

Although many companies have entered the recreation field voluntarily, there is now no law that requires provision of facilities.

Although, as Marshall added:

"On some of the longer-term tenures we do require that the licencee include recreation and other resource measures in his planning."

When the operator plans his licence for cutting, he has to show how he has taken measures to preserve stream quality and aesthetics.

Despite relying mainly on personal contact to explain where the sites are located, the forest service found that the areas it did service, especially on the Island, were pretty well filled during the summer.

Advertising the sites would only add to the load and decrease the pleasure of the people who took the time and effort to find the area. It would also bring on a demand for more "civilized" facilities.

"We think the low-key, rustic approach to wilderness areas is the proper one," Marshall said.

Feedback from all forest districts seems to support this approach.

And these comments came from quite a few people. Conservative estimates indicate 150,000 to 160,000 campers used these facilities in 1972 and Marshall expects this number to swell to 300,000 by the end of this year.

American tourists are discovering the sites in increasing numbers, but the main use still is by local residents.

Asked about possible effects of the current energy crisis, Marshall speculated a little.

"I think this kind of recreation use might actually increase with tighter gas and tighter money because it is a low-cost local possibility."

Disaster Strikes Bucks

Things were going well for Ingraham Buckaroos Tuesday night — until that disastrous second period.

Buckaroos, of the Victoria Intermediate Hockey League, trailed Chemainus Blues, leaders of the Vancouver Island League, 2-1 after the first period of their interlocking game at Memorial Arena.

Then Blues hammered in four quick goals, took a 6-3 lead into the third period, and went on to a 7-4 victory.

Ron Cooke, Tom Allen, John Williams and Gary Loudon got the Ingraham goals.

NEW HIGH-YIELD RICE UNVEILED

MANILA (WP) — The International Rice Research Institute at Los Banos, 40 miles south of Manila, has announced that a new variety of high-yield rice is ready for general use.

The new strain is genetically more resistant to tropical plant diseases than previous high-yield strains, and scientists hope it will prove more acceptable to farmers. It is the result of four years' experiments.

In the 1960s, the new hybrid rice varieties developed at Los Banos and at other research centres were heralded as "miracle rice" — the answer to tropical Asia's food supply in the face of ever-increasing populations.

There is less talk about miracles now, however, for last year South and Southeast Asia suffered disastrous droughts, and in some areas floods, that caused what the Philippine under secretary of agriculture, Jose D. Drilon, called "the worst rice shortage in 30 years."

Weather is but one of the problems that have conspired to frustrate the high expectations of the new technology.

'CAMP GRANADA' SATIRIST DIES

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Allan Sherman, 49, whose Hello Mother, Hello Father routine made him an instant star, died Tuesday while entertaining friends.

His physician, Dr. Charles Kivowitz, "stated he had suffered a respiratory failure," police said.

Sherman, once the picture of a jolly fat man, entered a hospital at his doctor's urging in 1965 to lose weight. He reduced from 230 pounds to 190, once remarking, "if charm consists of fat, to heck with it."

Sherman's recording in 1962 of a young boy's exploits at Camp Granada brought him from obscurity into the national spotlight and earned him numerous night club and television appearances.

Barmaids Frigid!

DETROIT (AP) — With temperatures lowered at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to save fuel, some chilly cocktail waitresses are trying to win the right to wear sweaters over their low-cut blouses.

"They're freezing to death," said Myra Wolfgang, president of Local 705 of the Hotel, Motel and Restaurant Employees, Union. "Even with the fuel crisis, I guess the company figures sex objects shouldn't get wrapped up in sweaters."

Host International, the airport concessionaire, said allowing the waitresses to wear sweaters would alter the firm's image.

"I'll believe it when I see it," said Mrs. Wolfgang. "I can understand them wanting a uniform to designate the waitresses, but I'm sure good Americans wouldn't mind chilly waitresses getting dressed up in something sensible — like wool slacks and a nice blouse," she said.

One Thing, Then Another

FALKVILLE, Ala. — Jeff Greenshaw, this town's only policeman, took a photograph last month of a mysterious, silvery creature walking along a rural road. Now he wishes he hadn't.

The picture, brought Greenshaw, 23, publicity . . . and a lot of trouble.

Shortly after the incident, Greenshaw began receiving threatening telephone calls. Next his car engine blew up.

Then his wife left him.

Then the house trailer Greenshaw moved into after his divorce was destroyed by fire.

Last Friday, city officials asked Greenshaw to resign.

CHICAGO — Thieves who stole jewellery worth $5,000 from comedian Don Rickles have returned a bracelet and a necklace with sentimental value to Rickles's mother.

Rickles said on the Johnny Carson television show last week that some of the jewellery, stolen from his hotel room 18 days ago, had great sentimental value.

The comedian's mother, who lives in Miami Beach, Fla., found an envelope on her door step last Saturday containing a gold bracelet, studded with diamonds and bearing the words "Mindy" and "Lawrence" — Rickles' children—and a gold charm necklace, police said.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Bernard Finch, who served 12 years in a California prison for the murder of his wife, will take a test next month in an attempt to regain his medical licence. Even if he passes, however, there's a chance a licence will not be issued until after an appeal court hearing.

GENEVA — A magistrate's court today refused bail for financier Bernard Cornfeld, former head of the once-mighty Investors Overseas Services mutual fund empire. Cornfeld, 44, was arrested last May 14 on charges of fraud and mismanagement of public money.

PHOENIX — John Scali, 55, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, underwent open heart surgery Tuesday. An 11-inch segment of vein from his leg was cut into three and transplanted to his chest to carry blood around constricted arteries to his heart.

LOCRI, Italy—When farmhand Giuseppe Femia went to the registry to ask for a certificate that he was a father of 13, they gave him a certificate that he was dead. Femia, 48, said the registrar insisted that according to his records Femia died in a Reggio Calabria hospital April 15. He will stay officially dead until the courts act on his request for a correction.

AN INSIDE SOLUTION

HAMILTON — Officials at Essex Packers Ltd. solved the mystery of meat disappearing from their freezers despite the hiring of a security guard.

They set watch on the plant and caught a culprit with $20 worth of top sirloin and pork tenderloin cuts.

It was the guard.

Frank Chadwick, 58, of Hamilton, was convicted Tuesday of theft under $200 and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

15,000 Homeless After Flooding

MANILA (AP) — At least 22 persons were reported dead, more than 15,000 homeless and many others isolated by flood waters today in the aftermath of a tropical storm that slashed across northern Mindanao and through the central Philippines.

Vicente Galvez, acting Red Cross secretary-general, said at least 2,370 homes in eight provinces were destroyed.

'Tittering Schoolboys'

OTTAWA (FP) — Grace MacInnis delivered a tongue-lashing to fellow MPs Tuesday for tittering like schoolboys whenever she talks about family planning.

Mrs. MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) was asking Manpower Minister Bob Andras in the Commons why the application by the Family Planning Association of B.C. for a Local Initiative Program grant was refused.

She observed that during the past year B.C. "has suffered" more than 8,000 abortions, more than 11 per cent illegitimate births and an increase of 11 per cent in gonorrhea.

While MPs heckled her, Speaker Lucien Lamoureux advised Mrs. MacInnis to ask questions of the minister instead of conveying information to the House.

"I was laying the groundwork for my question," the Vancouver MP said amid laughter.

"There seems in this House to be some idea that these subjects I raise are not of interest to Canadians across the country. There is a general school-boy type of titter which goes around when these questions are raised," she protested.

She advised MPs to give her a respectful hearing even though they don't think their constituents are interested, because they are.

Investment Curb Amendments Fail

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons rejected a series of opposition amendements to the government's proposed foreign investment legislation Tuesday, including two Conservative suggestions to give provinces a direct voice in investment screening.

The two amendements to facilitate provincial consultation were introduced by Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) and were rejected 114 to 101 and 112 to 99.

First introduced last January, the government's bill would establish an agency to screen foreign investment and would restrict expansion of foreign-controlled firms already operating in the country.

The bill is a new and tougher version of one that died when Parliament was dissolved for the October, 1972, general election.

Final-reading debate started immediately after the votes.

With few exceptions the eight recorded votes, which took nearly an hour to complete, saw the Liberals getting support from various parties, depending on which party originated a particular amendment.

On MacKay's two, the Conservatives and Social Credit faced a wall of Liberal and New Democraat rejection.

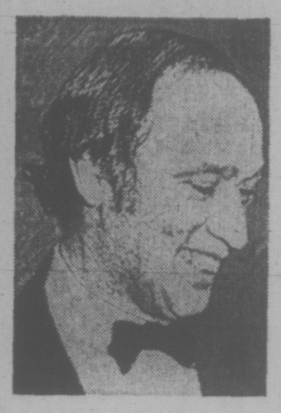
A sub-amendment by Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) would have allowed the Yukon and Northwest Territories councils a voice in foreign investment screening. It was defeated 112 to 103 with Peters and Frank Howard (Skeena) the only NDP members voting with the Conservatives and Social Credit.

Another Conservative amendement, by Jack Horner (Crowfoot), was defeated 125 to 90 when the Social Credit MPs voted with the government.

This amendment would have reduced the number of Canadian companies subject to foreign takeover by increasing the criteria of minimum gross assets of a company to $500,000 from $250,000.

The Liberals and Conservatives voted together to defeat a proposal by Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) that would have expanded the number of companies open to foreign takeover.

This amendment, rejected 178 to 34 with some Social Credit MPs supporting the NDP, would have reduced the annual gross revenue criteria to $1.5 million from $3 million.



'See Me in 10 Years'

By IAN HUNTER

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has invited universities looking for presidents to make him an offer in 10 years.

But Tuesday he denied any knowledge of a rumored presidential job offer from Simon Fraser University.

He suggested that B.C. Premier Dave Barrett may have had a hand in spreading the rumor.

Reg Stackhouse (PC — Scarborough East) asked Trudeau in the Commons if rumors that he is considering becoming president of SFU are true and if representatives of the university have been in touch with him about the job.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the question out of order on the grounds that it didn't refer to the official duties of the prime minister.

Outside the House, Trudeau said he hadn't heard of the rumor until it was raised by the Tory.

He noted that Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque had been "spreading rumors" that the prime minister intended getting out of politics.

"Now Barrett has been talking with Levesque, so maybe there's something there," he said, referring to the B.C. premier's proposal to meet with the PQ leader to discuss the establishment of a social democratic movement across Canada.

Reputation Sullied: Davis

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux thwarted an attempt by Environment Minister Jack Davis Tuesday to have himself cleared of a charge of "deliberately misleading" MPs.

The Speaker told Davis that the minister should have appealed for a withdrawal of the charge, made by John Lundrigan (PC — Gander — Twillingate), Monday, the day it was made.

The environment minister said after Tuesday's sitting that he was not satisfied that his honor had been restored.

"But what can you do?" Davis said. "I suppose when I entered politics I should have been prepared to have my reputation sullied."

On Tuesday the minister rose on a point of privilege to demand that the Newfoundland MP "make a full and unequivocal withdrawal" of his charge made the day before.

Lamoureux said that the Tory MP had "made something" that satisfied him at the time, and noted that he had asked for guidanee from Davis then — "But this didn't invoke a response."

He said that under House rules the matter could not be raised again 24 hours later.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the Liberals would drop the matter "on the assurance" that Lundrigan had fully withdrawn his remarks Monday.

No such assurance was given, and the Speaker refused to allow the debate on the issue to continue.

Noose Ban Passes Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate voted 37 to 20 Tuesday to approve the principle of the government's bill to extend the partial ban on hanging.

Eleven Conservatives, seven Liberals, one Independent and one Social Credit member voted against extending the capital punishment ban, which excludes killers of policemen and prison guards, for another five years. One independent Liberal and 36 Liberals voted for the bill.

Standing in the 102-seat Senate: Liberal 72, Conservative 17, Independtnt two, independent Liberal one, Social Credit one, and vacant nine.

Egypt's Economy Bounces Back Quickly From War

By WILLIAM DULLFORCE
Special to the Times

CAIRO — Egypt's economy, lower-geared than Israel's, has absorbed the shock of the October war and is now set with Arab oil-state backing for lengthy bargaining over a final peace settlement, foreign economic experts here say.

Industry and agriculture have emerged intact from the war. The oil refineries, smashed by Israeli air power in 1967 and subsequently rebuilt in Alexandria, Cairo and Tanta, are untouched.

Damage to the transport network has been quickly repaired.

During the war, prices soared, foreign trade slowed down and shortages of raw materials for factories began to appear. But donations from Arab oil producers brought a marked improvement in the country's foreign currency position.

In the month following the outbreak of war Egypt received some $300 million in hard currency from its allies. Since then, Egyptian sources say, Saudi Arabia at least has contributed substantially more.

The $300 million total does not include payments made directly by the Arab oil states, including Algeria and Libya, for arms.

Informed Egyptian sources report that the Soviet Union insisted on payment in hard currencies for most of the advanced electronic weaponry and other equipment, including helicopters, which it rushed in.

Egyptian officials say that the total was earmarked for the war effort beyond the Soviet arms shipments.

Foreign businessmen, who have been nursing unpaid debts for months and even years, were astonished to receive payments last month, while the fighting was still on.

Trade officials are now indicating that they can pay cash for some essential imports. An urgent order for heavy lubricants placed with a major U.S. oil company was promptly paid.

Despite the fertility of the Nile Valley and relatively intensive cultivation techniques, Egypt relies heavily on imports of basic foodstuff.

There was much speculation among foreign experts last month that wheat imports would prove to be Egypt's Achilles heel in the war.

Egypt currently needs to import 2½ million tons of wheat each year.

By running up unpaid debts over the past few years, Egypt successively alienated her main suppliers, the United States, Canada and, finally last year, Australia.

As prices rocketed on the world wheat market, Egypt's position seemed to be precarious.

Now, officials say, Egypt has enough wheat stockpiled for two months, and is concluding a deal for about 350,000 tons of Romanian wheat.

Last week, having paid enough of its debt, Egypt sent a team to Australia to negotiate a one-million-ton purchase with delivery to start in February.

To beat high-interest credit terms available on the sellers' market, Egypt has been arranging its own cheaper credit finance and paying exporters in cash.

In September the Egyptian-managed Arab International Bank got a $50 million credit from the Moscow Narodny Bank on favorable terms, and the Saudis have also been providing cheap credit.

Officials state, correctly, that these new financing methods, backed by the Arab oil states, were operating before the October war, but the Arab currency support has clearly been accelerated over the past month.

Nessie Hunt Halted

LONDON (AP) — A Japanese expedition hunting the Loch Ness monster suspended the chase Tuesday after a two-month search.

Net result so far — a pile of unidentified bones and some weird underwater noises heard by the divers.

"We are very disappointed," a spokesman for the 16-man expedition said. "But we shall be back early next spring to try again."

The second phase of the Japanese operation will use a specially-built unmanned computer-operated capsule, the spokesman said.

RE-ARREST FORECAST

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler could be arrested again and brought before the courts if he continues performing abortions "as if he was above the law," Crown prosecutor Louis Robichaud says.

Robichaud, who filed an appeal Friday against Morgentaler's acquittal last week on an abortion charge, said in a statement the doctor still has to respect his bail conditions pending other trials on abortion charges.

"The essential condition of his freedom," he said, "was that he respect the law which implies not performing illegal abortions."

Morgentaler said in an interview two days after his acquittal that he had returned to work and was once again performing abortions.

He was not available to comment on Robichaud's statement.

"He (Dr. Morgentaler) has apparently taken the decision that he is above the law, Robichaud said, "and gives these abortions an appearance of legality and respectability despite the Criminal Code's formal interdiction."

The Crown appeal is based on 15 points of law. The date set for the hearing has not been set.

Robichaud has asked that the appeal be heard as soon as possible.

PAIR BURNED BODY OF ROCK SINGER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men who pleaded guilty to stealing the body of rock singer Gram Parsons and setting it afire in the desert were given suspended jail sentences, fined and ordered to pay funeral home expenses.

Philip C. Kaufman, 38, Parsons' manager, and Michael Martin, 26, were charged with grand theft but pleaded guilty to misdemeanor theft.

They were given suspended 30-day jail sentences, fined $300 each and ordered to pay $708 expenses to the Yucca Valley funeral home that handled the cremated remains.

The men, posing as funeral home employees, took the coffin containing Parsons' body from a loading dock at Los Angeles International Airport Sept. 20.

The ritual burning, performed near a campground in Riverside County's Joshua Tree National Monument, was allegedly in response to Parsons' wishes.

Parsons — who sang with The Byrds and later the Flying Burrito Brothers, died of a drug overdose in a Joshua Tree hotel room.

Lots Going On In Outer Space

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Space is dustier than expected between the asteroid belt and the planet Jupiter.

That is the latest finding of the pioneer 10 spacecraft as it approaches Jupiter after a 21-month voyage from Cape Canaveral. The probe will pass 81,000 miles from the great planet Dec. 3 and radio back what scientists hope will be the answers to some of Jupiter's many mysteries.

William Kinard, one of the project investigators, said at a news conference that three particle detection instruments aboard Pioneer 10 showed that tiny bits of space debris are 100 times more abundant than anticipated since the probe crossed the asteroid belt.

And he said he expects Pioneer 10 to detect 30 times more dust held in the gravitational grasp of the immense planet.

Pioneer is the first spacecraft to travel out past the orbit of Mars and scientists expected it to find large amounts of dust-sized particles in the belt of rock and debris between Mars and Jupiter.

Instead, the probe's instruments saw no more dust than before it entered the belt. Very little dust was expected after Pioneer 10 left the asteroid belt.

What this means, Kinard said, is that scientists may have to look for new origins of space dust. It had been believed that the particles came from the grinding action of collisions of asteroids and from the slow disintegration of comets.

DAKOTA BOOK-BURNING

PARTS OF THIS PAGE ARE IN COLOUR

Fiery Wave of Protest Grows

DRAKE, N.D. (NYT) — Already there is in the Dakota air a chill foretaste of the great Arctic gales that sweep down out of Canada, driving winter temperatures to 30 below zero, flinging across the plains a curtain of snow that wipes from view the water tower and grain elevator that are the main landmarks of this trackside hamlet.

The 650 people who live here are a flinty breed, used to such storms.

But nothing prepared the folk of Drake for the storm that broke here early this month and that has swirled about them ever since.

On Nov. 7, Mrs. Sheldon Summers, a custodian at Drake's combination elementary and high school, opened the doors of the furnace beneath the school gym and tossed in 32 paperback copies of Kurt Vonnegut's novel Slaughterhouse Five, which a 26-year-old English teacher had assigned to his sophomore class. She destroyed the books on orders of the Drake School Board, which found the novel profane and therefore unsuitable for use in class.

As the word percolated outward, the response was furious. A "mindless, primitive act of censorship," Jerome Weidman, the novelist who heads the Authors League of America, said in a letter to Drake school officials.

An "arbitrary, capricious and subjective" violation of free speech," fumed the American Civil Liberties Union chapter in nearby Minot.

"Almost inconceivable," said the North Dakota branch of the National Education Association.

"Everybody's against book-burning," offered Vonnegut.

Newsmen have been descending upon Drake. Telephone lines have been jammed. Some school officials and some parents who instigated the removal of the books have dived for cover, evading questioners by a variety of means.

Drake at large is dumbfounded and vaguely upset by the notoriety. "What did we do?" the town seems to be asking.

"People are still sort of shaking their heads, like, 'what happened?'" Galen Strand, pastor of the Drake Lutheran Church, said.

What happened is not necessarily all it seemed at first. But it does offer a striking example of a perennial question in American public education: how are the requirements of free inquiry and academic freedom to be balanced against the dominant mores and values of the community?

For, stripped of the sensational and symbolic aspect of the actual burning of the books, the banning that took place here is hardly unusual in the United States.

Into this community last year came the 26-year-old English teacher, Bruce Severy, his wife, Sally, and their five-year-old daughter, Liz. The Severys are from Southern California.

"I think kids should be taught how to think, not what to think," Severy said the other day. It was in that spirit, he said, that he assigned Slaughterhouse Five and a second contemporary novel, James Dickey's Deliverance.

"I felt the books dealt with current problems," he said, "problems we all have to face in our age, in a straightforward way. These kids are going to have to go out and live in that world."

But if some people in Drake agreed with Severy's position, some thought that the profanity and sexual references in both books were too much to bear.

At a special School Board meeting, the books were attacked as being unsuitable for 15-year-old minds. After reading the book in whole or in part, the board members agreed, unanimously, and ordered the copies of Slaughterhouse Five destroyed.

How to destroy the Vonnegut books? The way anything else is customarily destroyed at the school, according to school Superintendent Dale Fuhrman. "I gave them to the janitor as I would my waste paper," he said.

Did the symbolic significance of burning books occur to anyone? "No," Fuhrman said. "We didn't think we were doing anything wrong. We didn't say the kids couldn't read the books or even bring them into school. We just said they couldn't be used in class."

When the storm broke, townspeople here commonly thought there was little wrong with the action except that the burning itself was unwise. Better the books should have been stored away, they say. That, in effect, is what has been done in many other communities where school boards — as they "not uncommonly" do, according to the National Education Association — forbid the use of particular books in classrooms.

In the meantime, Slaughterhouse Five remains proscribed for classroom use here.

Bruce Severy's future is in doubt. He says he has been given to understand that he will not be re-hired next year, but Fuhrman says the school board has not discussed the matter.

YOUR LICENCE PLATES
STAY WITH YOU.
NOT YOUR CAR.

Or your truck.
Or your motorcycle.
Or your trailer.
Or any vehicle with British Columbia licence plates.

This means if you're selling or trading any vehicle in British Columbia after November 24th, your licence plates no longer go with the car, they stay with you.

When you buy another vehicle, put your old plates on your new vehicle when you acquire it.

Then, to register this vehicle in your name, submit a notice of transfer of ownership at any Motor Licence Office. New forms have been prepared for this purpose.

If you don't have plates for a new vehicle (in the case of your first car, for example), new plates can be obtained from any Motor Licence Office.

If you dispose of your vehicle and don't replace it (for example, if it is wrecked), take your plates to the nearest Motor Licence Office to see if you qualify for a refund on the portion of the licence year remaining.

This new system is being introduced because the licence plates that are on your vehicle now are an essential part of your new provincial auto insurance plan that begins March 1, 1974.

If you have any questions about the new licence plate system, contact your nearest Motor Licence Office.

ID Cards Available 'On Demand'

Not since the Second World War when civilians were required to carry National Registration cards have government-issued identification (ID) cards been compulsory in Canada.

But ID cards for specific purposes—driver's licence, social security card, health insurance—as well as credit and membership cards clutter most wallets or purses.

Saskatchewan is studying the possibility of giving every resident a number to be used in dealing with the provincial government.

This number would appear on driver's licence, medical care card and other documents. However, a spokesman for the department emphasized the idea is only being considered and, even if implemented, would not necessarily involve an ID card.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press also shows some form of ID cards are available on a voluntary basis in most provinces for two age groups—young people and senior citizens.

USEFUL IN PUBS

With such IDs, the holder, depending on age, may buy liquor or drink in a pub with no embarrassing "hey, sonny" questions, travel on public transit at reduced fares or even be admitted half-price to some theatres.

British Columbia offers an identity card to anyone 19 or older. In Manitoba, the government has approved a standard format for a proof-of-age card for those at least 18 but production and distribution is up to private organizations.

In several other provinces—Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario, New Brunswick and Newfoundland—provincial liquor boards offer ID cards to young people who apply for them.

Such "permission to drink" cards haven't been wildly popular in the East. Since last May, when the Liquor Control Board of Ontario announced cards for those at least 18,—fewer than 200 have been issued. In New Brunswick in five years only about 240 have been sent out to applicants. Newfoundland's liquor board reports only a few cards issued.

THOUSANDS ISSUED

In Alberta, however, the liquor board says that since ID cards for young people were started in 1971 more than 84,700 have been requested and in Saskatchewan liquor authorities have filled requests for 6,000 cards.

Virtually all public transit systems offer ID cards permitting students to travel at reduced fares. Such cards usually are available through schools either free or for a nominal fee—in Toronto an estimated 300,000 cards are in use.

Senior citizens also get reduced fares in Toronto—eight tickets for $1, half the regular rate—if they present an ID card stating they have reached 65.

The cards may be obtained free from the Metropolitan Toronto social services department and about 134,000 have been issued.

With such proof of ample years, certain goods and services may be available at a lower rate. One Toronto trust company eliminates cheque cashing charges on current accounts of senior citizens. And they are admitted at half price to the Victory Burlesque, Toronto's oldest established strip-tease palace.

PASSES CHEAP

In Edmonton, elderly residents may obtain for $5 a pass for the city's public transit. Winnipeg's transit cards for pensioners, as well as students, cost $1 while in Regina a senior citizen's pass good for one year of public transportation is $10. But in Montreal, there are no reduced transit rates for pensioners.

Proof-of-age cards issued by provincial liquor boards usually require from the applicant at least one passport-type photograph, which appears on the card, and a birth certificate.

Ontario also requires the signature of a guarantor who is a Canadian citizen, at least 18 years old and has known the applicant for a minimum one year.

"We do get these little devils who take an older brother's birth certificate down and have their own picture put on the card."

In Quebec province, students under 18 must obtain cards either from their schools or the Montreal Urban Transportation Commission to take advantage of reduced transit fares in Montreal.

Identity cards are not in use in either Nova Scotia or Prince Edward Island but in P.E.I., where driver's licences bear the photograph of the holder, they are occasionally requested in liquor stores where the age of the purchaser is in doubt.

COURSE ON WATERGATE

GENESEO, N.Y. (AP) — State University College at Geneseo will offer its students a new course in the spring—The Meaning of Watergate.

The course was devised by nine professors who said it would be "an examination of American Society and its relationship to the political process."

In a statement, the professors said the course would concern "the constitutional questions of separation of powers and the system of checks and balances. It may be that we can suggest ways to avoid such episodes in the future."

The course will earn three credits for successful completion.

Liddy Suspended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court Monday suspended Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy from practising law and issued an order requiring Liddy to show cause within 40 days why he should not be disbarred from practising law before the high court.

Liddy, 43, was sentenced in March to six years, eight months minimum and 20 years maximum for his part in the Watergate break-in. He now is serving a shorter sentence for contempt of court.

The Fish Aren't Biting

OTTAWA (CP) — Tory MP Allan McKinnon, like many west coast residents, is an ardent salmon fisherman. The trouble is, he says, the fish aren't biting often these days.

McKinnon (Victoria) blames commercial trollers, which he says are catching about a million coho salmon before the sport fishing season opens each year.

These fish have to be tossed back, but he said Tuesday they are either dead or badly damaged by hooks.

In the Commons this week, he asked Environment Minister Jack Davis to do something about the situation and was told that Canada-United States salmon fishing agreements might alleviate some of the problem.

"I'll give him about a month," said McKinnon. Then he intends to raise the subject again.

He is worried that the British Columbia sports salmon fishing industry, which employs between 1,000 and 1,200 persons might suffer severely if the current situation exists much longer.

Guaranteed Pay No Cure To Work Woes, Lalonde

MONTREAL (CP) — In a statement rejecting a guaranteed income policy for Canada, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday night a major social security challenge ahead involves finding new job opportunities for the unemployed.

He said a guaranteed income plan would give Canadians a choice of whether to work or not to work "and I don't think such a plan would be consistent with the values of the vast majority of Canadians."

In an address to a dinner of the Canadian Tax Foundation, Mr. Lalonde outlined what he called the three major future challenges.

These are:

—To find a way of substituting earnings for social assistance and unemployment insurance wherever a person may be able to work;

—To find a way of supplementing the incomes of those who are working for wages below minimum acceptable levels;

—To find a way to phase new programs in and old programs out without being socially, economically or financially disruptive.

LALONDE

Lalonde said exceptions to the first point would be people who are retired or totally disabled and single parents who decide in the interest of their children not to seek employment outside the home.

He said he has heard support for the employment opportunities approach from social workers, businessmen and partially disabled persons who want to "earn their own way."

The government will have to root out of its social security system programs and practices which legitimize idleness, Lalonde said, without naming any specific program.

He proposed that a new team of "social entrepreneurs" be created to help people find jobs and keep them and to assist employers to take on workers with some physical handicaps or other disabilities.

These social entrepreneurs would work with the chronically unemployed and people on welfare to uncover job opportunities with potential employers.

The alternatives to a plan of assured employment, the minister said, are a guaranteed income for everyone whether he or she works or guaranteed deprivation through lack of employment or income.

"You have no other choice. You have to create employment opportunities for people who are unable otherwise to find them.

"It . . . will take all of the ingenuity we possess . . . to solve this problem which until now we have largely taken to be an insoluble one."

WIRETAP CHANGES BACK PROVINCES

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang has submitted a series of amendments that go part way toward meeting objections from provincial attorneys-general to an altered wiretap bill that comes before the Commons this week.

He gave notice of the amendements in the House order paper Tuesday after opposition members on the Commons justice committee refused to heed the plea of the attorneys-general on the matter of indirect evidence.

This would include evidence obtained by wiretap that would be illegal under provisions of the government bill.

Attorneys-general, police associations, and Mr. Lang protested a committee decision earlier this year to strike out clauses of the bill which would have made indirect evidence usable in court.

Lang told the committee that refusing police the right to use indirect evidence would deny courts information necessary for arriving at the truth.

He also said that the committee action would result in many trials within trials, since lawyers would argue over whether evidence came as a result of an illegal wiretap.

Under Lang's compromise amendements, indirect evidence would be allowed by a judge. This differs somewhat from the original wording by leaving the decision to the discretion of individual judges.

The bill would outlaw most forms of wiretapping but would allow restricted use by police with permission from a judge.

THE ROGERS CHRISTMAS RECIPES

Rogers Fruit Cake

½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup ROGERS' GOLDEN SYRUP
3 well-beaten eggs
½ cup ground almonds
½ cup chopped almonds
6 tbsp. orange juice
¾ cup chopped dark raisins
¾ cup chopped light raisins
¾ cup chopped glacé fruit (cherries, citron, orange, etc.)
2 cups all-purpose flour
½ tsp. soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. allspice
½ tsp. mace
¼ tsp. cloves

The day before baking, sprinkle chopped fruit with 4 tablespoons of the fruit juice. Leave juice to soak into fruit. Preheat oven to 300°F. Cream butter and sugar. Beat in syrup and eggs. Sprinkle fruit with ground almonds. Sift flour, soda and spices. Sprinkle fruit with enough spiced flour to make a dry mixture you can handle with your fingers. Add spiced flour to butter mixture alternately with 2 tablespoons fruit juice. Fold in floured fruit and chopped almonds. Bake about 2 hours in a six-inch pan 2½ to 3 inches deep (middle sized Christmas cake pan).

Note: Line pan with several layers of greased brown paper or with foil. Fasten a jacket of brown paper, cardboard or newspaper around pan to help cake bake evenly.

Divinity Fudge

½ cup ROGERS' GOLDEN SYRUP
½ cup hot water
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 tsp. vanilla
Few drops almond extract
½ cup chopped nuts, or preserved ginger

Boil sugar, Rogers' Golden Syrup, and water to 234-240°F, or until mixture forms soft ball when tested in cold water. Beating continually, pour ½ this hot syrup over stiff egg whites; blend well. Return remaining syrup to heat and boil to hard ball stage (255-265°F). Slowly pour over egg whites. Beat well and when thickening add flavorings, nuts or ginger. Pour into greased pan to harden.

ROGERS' GOLDEN SYRUP helps baking stay fresh longer, turns out extra-moist cakes and squares. Use it for more flavorful results in any recipe that calls for corn syrup. For a free ROGERS' RECIPE BOOK write: B.C. SUGAR REFINING CO. LTD., P.O. Box 2150, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 3V2.

TORONTO — John David Eaton, the department store executive who died Aug. 4 at 63, left his wife, Signy, $2 million, their Toronto house and summer properties, his will indicates.

Total value of the estate has not yet been determined, papers filed Nov. 8 in surrogate court show. Probate of the will was granted Nov. 9 by Judge F. J. Mac Rae.

In his will, dated Jan. 27, 1970, Eaton directed establishment of a fund equal to 34 per cent of the value of his estate. From that fund, he directed that his wife receive $2 million with servants and crew members of his yacht receiving amounts ranging from $2,500 to $25,000.

He directed that the residue of the fund be paid to a trust fund he established in 1958 to look after his four children. The rest of the estate goes to the Eaton Foundation.

A Supreme Court Bench Un-Warmed by Woman

I'm pleased to give most of this space today to a very good letter from Norrie Preston who is vice-president of the Victoria Status of Women Action Group.

Ms. Preston writes in response to a facetious comment here on the granting of full rights to women who may wish to work underground in mines, legislation which, as I noted, seemed to be taken by the women's liberation movement as something short of a victory.

Since Norrie comments in her letter on my attitude to the struggle for women's rights I just want to reiterate my views.

For many years I've been writing against legislation and unwritten pressures that discriminate against women. I believe that much remains to be done. But I also believe very strongly that it is not so much the male attitude now that holds back women as the female attitude, that such groups as the Victoria Status of Women should be concentrating on the education of women more than the education of men.

How can we take seriously the suggestion that there should be women as Supreme Court judges or school inspectors when women generally are failing miserably to live up to the most basic responsibilities?

In their fundamental role as consumers they've allowed themselves to become gypped by gimmicks and contests and merchandising tricks at the expense of quality and price. In the world of day-time television and day-time radio they have shown an appetite for tasteless garbage. In life generally, in far too many cases, they have become disgruntled, passive and resentful.

With that reservation, I offer Norrie's letter as an articulate view of a position with which I agree.

Dear Jack:

I am afraid your hang-ups about women are showing! If you are indeed waiting breathlessly for our celebration with marches and fireworks then you are going to turn blue.

The facts in this matter are that:

The Provincial Civil Service Commission advertises one job for men, another for women at a lower pay;

Only 1.3 per cent of the Civil Service Administration are women;

Only one woman is a principal out of 54 school principals in the Victoria School District;

Only one woman is a school inspector in all of British Columbia;

Only 10 per cent of doctors are women, but nearly 100 per cent of nurses are women;

Only 3.9 per cent of all managerial positions are held by women;

Women earn only 20 per cent of all earned income in Canada although they make up 35.3 per cent of the total labor force;

And women make up two-thirds of the nation's poor people.

The celebration will take place when there is some indication that there is equality of opportunity.

You should also be aware that:

Indian women are deprived in the same circumstances in which their male counterparts are privileged;

No woman has ever sat on the Supreme Court of Canada;

Only eight of 102 seats in the Senate are appointed to women at this time;

Only 24 women have been elected to Parliament since 1921 when they received the franchise;

Only one woman in all the Federal Civil Service has the status of deputy minister.

The jubilant march will take place when women actually have freedom of choice. As for the fireworks, I will personally let off one large roman candle when people like you, Jack, stop the snickering. I think that you are a person who would go along with the principle that "there should be equality of opportunity to share the responsibilities of society as well as its privileges."

Business Boom From the Sea

Business bonanza is being enjoyed by local merchants through the annual refit of the P and O line's 720-foot luxury liner Arcadia in the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

Some 360 restaurant chairs — acting head waiter Peter Norris is seen at jettyside with a portion of them — are being recovered by Gregg's Upholstery. An additional 250 pieces of furniture are also being upholstered.

Nu-Way Cleaners have the job of cleaning all cabin furnishings and Carpetorium Ltd. are cleaning all the carpets and loose upholstery.

The line's hotel services manager Albert J. Booth was in Victoria in September to size up local capabilities and decided Victoria would be ideal as the first spot Arcadia has had her annual refit outside her home port of Southampton.

ISHERWOODS FACE CHARGE

Former Saanich alderman and city lawyer Foster Isherwood has been charged jointly with three members of his family with violating an order of the B.C. pollution control board by allowing effluent to discharge on property at the Royal Oak Motel, 4676 Elk Lake.

The charge, sworn Nov. 8, was read in Victoria provincial court this morning.

Also named are Joseph Clayton Isherwood, George B. Isherwood and John C. Isherwood co-owners of the motel.

Fire Inspectors Checking Centre

Fire inspectors were scheduled to visit the Open Space arts centre on lower Fort Street this afternoon and if the centre passes muster, the show will go on tonight.

Director Gene Miller said today he had been expecting the inspection Tuesday but the delay was a question of co-ordinating the visit of more than one inspector.

Open Space has been closed to the public for almost three weeks for a variety of structural and equipment modifications after a council committee told him it would no longer tolerate a potential fire hazard in the community.

If the centre passes inspection, Miller said Contemp-Arts will open tonight with Chuck Santon's Small Accumulation of Events, an environmental arts display.

The festival is scheduled to continue through Dec. 2 with music, dance, film, poetry and visual arts.

Major Role Forecast For Core Committee

As the mayors-elect of both Saanich and Oak Bay will not be serving on the Capital Regional Board, the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee will play a more important role as a common meeting ground for civic heads of the four core municipalities.

That prediction came from Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen today, when he told reporters he had already held preliminary discussions with Saanich Mayor-elect Ed Lum and Oak Bay Mayor-elect Brian Smith on using the committee as "a more effective co-ordinating vehicle in the four core municipalities."

Pollen said he regarded it as a "minor tragedy" that neither Lum nor Smith would be on the regional board, adding: "We must have some committee within which they can express their point of view on the total area."

He said they had both expressed "positive and enthusiastic" support for such intermunicipal co-operation, which should not be construed in any way as indicating they advocated amalgamation.

Smith had made it only too clear, before and after the election, that he wanted "no truck or trade as far as amalgamation is concerned," Pollen said.

The Victoria mayor has said on a number of recent occasions he would like to see the Intermunicipal Committee tackle such problems as bylaw rationalization in the Greater Victoria area and the co-ordination of recreation planning.

He has also said he would like to see area-wide collective bargaining, but noted today the proposal has received little or no support.

Pollen said he is more than ever convinced there must be "some rationalization of the governmental process in this area."

"If it is necessary to have amalgamation to achieve that I would strongly support it," he said.

If the four core municipalities were to amalgamate the combined population would be only just over 150,000, he said, "so it's not as if you'd be amalgamating some kind of monster."

Lum was quoted as saying before the election he considers amalgamation "inevitable," but Smith has repeatedly expressed his strong opposition to the idea, saying the voter would lose contact with his elected representatives in a bureaucratic colossus.

Pollen Backing Off In Reid Centre Fight

Just one week after he told city businessmen he would do everything in his power to kill the Reid Centre project, Mayor Peter Pollen said today he is not convinced that a continued legal fight would "serve any useful purpose."

He told reporters at his weekly press conference he had revised his thinking somewhat after talking to "some of the more learned members of city council."

A week ago today, at a mayoralty candidates' press conference staged by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Pollen said: "I am doing everything I legally can to impede the project."

Why the apparent change of mind?

Pollen denied he had altered his stance, confronting with indications that fellow council members regarded the Reid development as fait accompli.

But he admitted the fact that several aldermen turned out for the recent sod-turning ceremony on the Wharf Street site "didn't give me any great rousing feeling of solidarity."

"They were obviously enticed into the spiders' web by a fellow singing a very good lullaby," he commented, adding that Reid himself was fully adorned in "his promotional attire complete with dark glasses and colorful tie."

Pollen said he considered it "a rather foolish move to participate in this ludicrous spectacle."

And he added: "I obviously haven't received any encouragement or endorsation by my fellow members of council."

Following a recent B.C. Supreme Court ruling that Reid's land-use contract with the city was valid, despite doubts to the contrary caused by Reid's failure to meet certain time specifications, Pollen indicated he would urge city council to appeal the decision.

Today he would only explain his attitude by saying: "I am not convinced an appeal would be useless. But on the other hand I'm not convinced it would serve any useful purpose . . . to go through a bunch of manoeuvres without any clearly defined objective."

Timing Off But Scouts Really Earned an 'A'

JOHN

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The theory behind the test is to prove a Scout's capability of surviving in the wilderness.

The usual journey takes about two days.

This weekend two 14-year-olds from Victoria passed the test with flying colors.

Kevin Higgins and John Whelen were at the "pathfinder stage" in their Scout development when they set out on a trek by map and compass to the old ski chalet at Silver Lake near Mount Brenton, just west of Ladysmith.

Planning for the trip, which fulfils the "first class" Scout journey requirement, was long and in depth.

The boys predicted they could hike the eight miles through logging country on Saturday, stay overnight at the cabin and back-track to a pre-arranged rendezvous point on a highway near Ladysmith.

They were scheduled to come out of the woods Sunday at 4:30 p.m. Fifth Gary Oak Troop leader Brian Johnston was there to meet them . . . but the boys didn't show.

Police were notified and at dawn the next day both boys' parents found themselves at the Ladysmith RCMP headquarters awaiting the results of a massive search and rescue program by helicopter, tracking dogs and trail.

Mrs. Edward Whelen, 2631 Margate, John's mother, said she reads whenever she's "really concerned about something." Monday she was reading and "didn't remember a word I read."

The search terminated about noon Monday, however, when both boys appeared at the pre-arranged rendezvous, almost 24 hours late.

"The snow was so thick we had to crawl along," explained John. "When it got dark Saturday, we were so wet and cold we decided to set up camp, though there was no sign of the cabin."

He said a mineral field near Mount Brenton had thrown the compass direction off — "it kept pointing due east."

Also contributing to the time-lag in their journey was "an incredible amount of snow, and new logging roads not yet shown on an area map" the boys were using.

"I guess we had gone about eight miles Saturday but somewhere we got off the track."

"Okay on food," they curled up in sleeping bags for the night and in the morning found the chalet about a half-mile away.

The real problem surfaced then.

"We were lost and didn't know just where to proceed to the next day. Unfortunately we were misguided," said John, explaining they continued down a ravine as the snow continued. "We were right at the bottom, and there was no way a search party could have found us there.

"A couple of times we were going so slow we thought it would take days to get out," but the pair followed a river and with compass back to normal they happened on a logging road which led them to the meeting place.

"It was rather funny," said John, wrapping up the tale, "when we phoned home, we were told everybody was out looking for us."

"I guess we went about 20 miles — now all that's left is to do a report and then we find out if we passed."

The pathfinder stage, they explained, was designed to "prove we could survive in the wilderness."

New Source Arises For Heroin Imports

The French connection has been replaced by the Hong Kong connection, Camosun College students were told Tuesday.

Heroin that used to reach Vancouver Island from Turkey via Marseilles, France, is now coming from Southeast Asia via Hong Kong, said S.-Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria RCMP drug squad.

"We're getting very high quality Oriental heroin reaching this country from Hong Kong," Staples said.

Underground laboratories there are producing heroin that is 85 to 90 per cent pure, made from opium poppies grown in the "Golden Triangle," an area of Burma, Laos and Thailand, he said.

Staples said Mexican heroin is also turning up on the Island.

Traffic in heroin is now a $150-million-a-year business in British Columbia, with profits rivalling MacMillan Bloedel, he said.

The market for the drug continues to grow, he said.

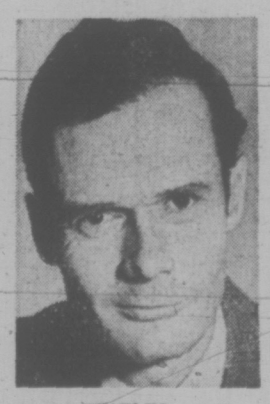
By 1971 that number had increased to 150, and in 1972 to 400-plus addicts, Staples said.

On Vancouver Island in 1972 there were 1,244 heroin addicts known to police, he said, and that number is "certainly more than 1,500 by now."

"Perhaps there are more than double that," said Staples.



STAPLES
. . . Hong Kong connection

Yet in 1965 only one Canadian city — Vancouver — had any heroin problem, he said. There were 600 known addicts in the city then, all in the 100-block East Hastings area.

By comparison, Montreal had 12 known addicts in 1965, Staples said.

A typical Victoria addict is between 17 and 24 years old, he said, and supports a three to four heroin capsule a day habit. A year and a half ago the average habit was one-quarter capsule a day.

Staples said one heroin capsule now costs $35 to $45. Last year at this time it cost $20.

The drug is brought to Vancouver from Hong Kong by a courier or "mule" who has been hired by the man financing the operation, he said.

It is hidden in the false bottom of luggage, taped to the courier's body, or imported in many other ways.

The courier gives the heroin to the "back end man" who cuts it three or four times to dilute it. Right now heroin on the street is 32 per cent pure, he said.

Staples said the back end man then lays down caches of heroin around the city — at the base of telephone poles or stop signs, or at the corner of a garage.

He gives the addresses of these caches to a "front end man", said Staples, and this man sells the addresses to a group of middlemen.

The middleman splits his cache into smaller bundles, lays them down at various places, and sells the addresses to street pushers, he said.

Middlemen and pushers are usually so dependent on heroin themselves they aren't making much money, he added.

Another drug causing problems in the Victoria area is a synthetic drug called MDA, said Staples.

"This drug has caused almost more overdose cases than heroin in this area at least," he said.

It is being manufactured in the area in large quantities, he said. There is no quality control, and one by-product can be strychnine, which is highly poisonous.

'Potential Hazard' in Logs

A manufactured fireplace log, marketed in Victoria stores complete with a long list of directions, is potentially hazardous, the B.C. Fire Marshal's office said Tuesday.

"Duraflame logs are a potential hazard if not used according to instructions clearly marked," says a bulletin issued to all fire departments in the province.

Acting on complaints from consumers in Vancouver — one critic said the log had started a chimney fire — the office asks that the five rules listed under the word "Caution" on the Duraflame packages be adhered to.

1—Do not burn in a sheet metal fireplace, pot-bellied stove or barbecue.

2—Never attempt to move or break up log after lighting — use of fire tong or poker could be hazardous.

3—Never add Duraflame to existing fire.

4—Do not use for cooking.

5—In emergency douse flames with sand, water or chemical fire extinguisher.

One Duraflame log, said Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates, puts out a total of 25,000 BTUs per hour and "that's a lot of heat."

"From the common sense point of view the logs should be properly used and properly secured if in a grate so there's no chance of it rolling out and breaking up."

He said the department of consumer affairs had investigated the product for possible listing on a hazardous products inventory, but instead asked that the producing company — Stockton Duraflame Inc., Stockton, Calif. — make directions more explicit.

The heat content also was reduced, before market sale. What was formerly a 90,000-BTU three-hour log is now a two-hour log.

Dogs Severed Boy's Jugular

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A spokesman for the Hudson Country prosecutor's office said Tuesday it may press criminal charges against Rufus Howard, 42, Jersey City, whose two dogs allegedly mauled and killed 6-year-old Herbert "Junior" Russell of Newark.

An autopsy performed by the Hudson County medical examiner's office revealed the child died from a severed jugular vein. The report also said the boy's buttocks, neck and right ear were "eaten away."

The child's body was found late Monday by police in a vacant lot where he sometimes played with one of the dogs.

Police killed both animals and subsequently found the body of another dog and the bones of other animals apparently killed by the German shepherds near the lot.

Howard told police he kept the dogs in a fenced-in area, but police said the fence had a hole. Howard also said the dogs should not have been hungry since they were fed two cans of dog food on Monday. Police said the dogs were not licenced.

The boy was reported missing by his grandmother, Ruby Johnson, about a half-hour before the body was found.

An unidentified 5-year-old boy in the neighborhood told police the boy was attacked just before dark. Other neighbors said the dogs often barked and attacked people walking along the street.

SPEED LIMIT CUT CHALLENGED

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Four Seattle motorists have filed suit in Superior Court here challenging the state's new 50-mile-an-hour speed limit.

Bruce McAlister, Linda Mitchell, Paul Delamare and Roy Mortson said in the suit they are owners of small cars "designed to operate economically at legal highway speeds."

In the request for a declaratory judgment declaring illegal the speed limits set by the highway commission, the four contend they have to shift their cars to lower gears to meet the speed limits and this reduces fuel economy and adds to wear and tear on their vehicles.

This, they said, results in direct loss of money to them.

The suit contends the highway commission in setting the speed limits was in excess of its authority, acted "in a capricious manner" and without proper evidence.

Ex-Socred Tied To Licence Deal

EDMONTON (CP) — The former head of an Alberta insurance company being investigated at a public inquiry brought the name of a former provincial treasurer, E. W. (Ted) Hinman, into the case Tuesday.

But a few minutes after Albert Jaasma, former president of Cosmopolitan Life Assurance Co., mentioned Hinman's name, District Court Judge Roger Kerans cautioned spectators and press the statements were "heresay evidence . . . generally considered unreliable."

Kerans, who is presiding over the inquiry, made the comment following questioning of Jaasma's testimony by Cameron Steer, an Edmonton lawyer.

Jaasma, testifying about his business dealings in 1962 when Cosmopolitan was seeking its licence, said he was retained by Reo Realities, co-owned by Hinman, to find a buyer for Edmonton Produce, a Lethbridge-based poultry operation.

Hinman was then provincial treasurer in the Social Credit government.

Jaasma said Hinman told him it was in his "best interest" to help sell Edmonton Produce because Jaasma had not yet received his licence to form Cosmopolitan.

Jaasma said he was to be paid $35,000 in commission for finding a buyer. He said he arranged a sale to Ogilvie Flour Mills, but did not receive the commission.

He said he then went to the owner of Edmonton Produce, Jake Superstein, who told him the commission had been given to Hinman.

Jaasma said Hinman denied receiving the money, but Jaasma didn't pursue the matter because he "didn't feel so comfortable because I was just getting a licence for the insurance business."

He also said although Cosmopolitan was the first insurance company to apply for a licence in the province in 30 years, three other private firms received their licences before Cosmopolitan.

These included Seaboard Life Insurance Co. of Vancouver, whose president, Harry Seed, said the company paid $25,000 to obtain its licence, said Jaasma. He did not elaborate.

Under questioning by the inquiry's general counsel, J. C. Major of Calgary, Jaasma said losses from the collapse of Cosmopolitan and its present company, P.A.P. Holdings Ltd., totalled "in excess of $5 million."

These losses also pertained to shareholders in six related companies in Alberta and British Columbia, including Seaboard, Canamera Enterprises Ltd., Rocky Holdings Ltd., Sioux Holdings Ltd., Columbia Beneficial Holdings Ltd. and Balmoral Developments Ltd.

Jaasma estimated $1.9 million was lost in 1970 when P.A.P. was unable to make final payments on the purchase of North West Financial Corp. of B.C.

At Home on the Range . . . In Germany!

By JOHN M. GOSHKO

COLOGNE, West Germany (WP) — The building, a blockhouse painstakingly fashioned from rough-hewn logs, clearly belongs back in the Dakota badlands of a century ago. Yet, it stands, as though transported by some time machine, in a patch of woods on the outskirts of this sooty industrial city.

Officially, its name is Nukla-kai-at, which means "home of peace" in the Sioux language. But everyone in the neighborhood refers to it as "that cowboys-and-Indians place."

A visitor stopping by on any Saturday or Sunday would immediately see why. This is the clubhouse of the Prariefreunde (Friends of the Prairie), an organization of mostly middle-aged men with a passion for reliving the dreams of their boyhood.

For example, there's the club's chairman, Karl Otto Kroll, 43. Five days a week he works as a master mechanic in a Cologne foundry. But on weekends he turns into a 19th-century Sioux warrior named Wihinapa (Sioux for "Rising Fire").

All other members undergo a similar transformation. Their's is the wekend fantasy world of men seeking a few hours of respite from their every day lives as truck drivers and gardeners, engineers and government bureaucrats. Within the closed fellowship of the club, they can shed their contemporary identities and become a colorful company of Indians, cowboys, plainsmen and cavalry troopers.

Nor are the Prariefreunde unique. The group is only one of the scores of Wild West clubs that abound in every corner of West Germany and that are the most tangible symbol of this country's fascination with the romance of the old American west.

The clubs boast such names as Arizona Bays, Yakimas, Sieoux Nevada or U.S.-Cavalry, and they draw their members from every walk of German life. No one knows just how many of these groups there actually are. But 63 of them, including Cologne's Prariefreunde, are banded together in a western clubs federation that collectively has more than 15,000 members.

This almost mystical attraction to the American west is not limited to Germany, but can be found in almost every European country. Most social historians agree that it dates from the first decades of this century when Hollywood began flooding the continent with "horse operas" filmed against actual western locales.

Americans might take the scenery for granted. But, as early as 1919, the pioneer French director and critic, Louis Delluc, was pointing out the impact the western background made on audiences in overcrowded and overcultivated Europe:

"... bare grey plains, mountains as steep and luminous as the screen itself, horses and men in all their brute strength, the tremendous intensity of a life so simple that it has all the room in the world for beauty and harmony and contrast, and lends an incomparable spark of humanity to the simple sentiments like love and revenge which spring from it."

Shooting Justified

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A motorist was justified in shooting to death a motorcyclist who was harassing him on his way to work, Jefferson County coroner Jack Helton ruled Tuesday.

Helton said no charges would be filed against William Corn, 55, in the death of William Smith, 32, of Bessemer, who was identified as a member of the Devil's Disciples motorcycle gang. The coroner ruled justifiable homicide.

Corn told police Smith and another cyclist began following his car Monday night and after several blocks Smith pulled alongside and began hitting the car window with his helmet.

Cool Life Is Better

TORONTO (CP) — People can live and love better with the thermostats in their houses turned down, University of Toronto scientists say.

The scientists, who have been studying the reaction of the body to temperature changes, said Monday in interviews that people feel more active, sleep better and love better at lower temperatures.

Dr. Roy Shephard, professor of applied physiology at the university's school of hygiene, recommended that the house be kept at 68 or 69 degrees in the day and 60 at night.

He said such temperatures make people feel more active.

Shephard said, however, that the temperature should be kept higher in houses with babies, old people and those with repiratory problems.

Everyday Good Foods Can Make Yule Cake

By HILDA BEASTALL

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION
family

This recipe is for a "medium density" fruit cake for Christmas, with no icing. The ingredients are everyday good foods used perhaps just a little more lavishly for this special season. Cost is difficult to lay down, but nothing equally good can be bought for the price, since retail prices reflect the cost of ingredients plus labor and plus profits for the manufacturer.

You will notice the only peel used is that grated from the lemon rind and orange rind. Thus you get natural color and flavor.

Spices are kept to a minimum — less than 1 teaspoon mixed. You simply leave out the ones you don't wish to use. The sugar is demarara, and a scant ¾ cup loose measurement. The dark molasses is unsulfured. This adds some sweetness, but is main purpose here is to darken the cake with something which is acceptable as a food.

Use dark seedless raisins or sultanas, and currants, with some sticky seeded raisins if you can get them. They are probably a fantastic price this year.

Make up approximately 4 cups of fruit any way you like, then add the 1 cup of finely sliced dates as well.

Nuts can be your own choice. Buy broken nuts for baking, unsalted and unroasted.

Preparation and putting together took me just under two hours to the time the cakes went into the oven, but this included making written notes of adjusted amounts, plus answering phone calls which you too will have to deal with no doubt.

Decide on the tins you will use. This quantity makes one large cake about 9-inch top diameter and 3 inches deep. I made two mediums; one, 6-inch; one, 7-inch top diameter; both 2 inches deep; plus the usual two tiny ones in foil cups to test for flavor before publishing.

If you use fluted mould tins, grease well and dust with flour to avoid sticking. Plain tins are best lined with white floolscap paper cut to fit bottom and sides, then well greased. The longer baking dries the cake outside unless thus protected.

MEDIUM DENSITY CHRISTMAS CAKE

2 c. seedless raisins
1½ c. currants
½ c. seeded raisins
1 c. dates sliced thin
¾ c. mixed broken, chopped nuts
2 c. unbleached flour
1 c. mixed whole wheat flour and wheat germ
2 tsp brewer's yeast
¼ tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. mixed allspice, ginger, cloves
1 tsp. salt
1 c. soft margarine
¾ c. (loose measure) demarara sugar
2 large or 3 small eggs
¼ c. unsulfured molasses
1 lemon, juice and grated rind
1 orange, juice and grated rind

If the two juices do not make one-third cup, add water.

Measure dried fruits and chopped nuts into large bowl. Sprinkle with part of the unbleached flour. Separate the fruits with the fingers and stir with a fork into the flour.

Into another large bowl, sift the flours, including about ¼ c. wheat germ and the brewer's yeast, baking soda, baking powder, spices and salt. Mix these well with a large wood fork.

Begin adding flour mixture to the fruits, forking well together. Alternately add the creamed liquids, mixing after each addition.

If one bowl is not large enough to take the completed mixture, work at getting the creamed liquids added equally to the two bowls, juggling the fruit and flour quantities in each bowl.

This is what I had to do because neither of my two large bowls was large enough to contain the whole cake mixture. By working carefully between the two bowls I was finally satisfied of an equal mix.

Spoon the mixture into the tins until about three-quarters full; smooth over top with knife to cover fruit with a coating of the flour paste.

Bake in slow (300 degs.) oven for two cakes, two hours; or 275 degs. for one large cake for three hours. Test for "doneness" by inserting a clean knife in the centre to see if it comes out clean.

Tobacco Tins Led to Links

elizabeth forbes

You could call it a sentimental journey. The trip Irmgard McMaster and Barbara Miskiman made to Port Alice earlier this month.

True, Mrs. McMaster, as a life member of the golf club there, was going back to officiate at the ribbon cutting for a new clubhouse. True, Mrs. Miskiman was an early member of that club and won many annual cups and prizes.

However, it goes deeper than that. The two women were remembering back a good many years to a company town where their children grew up and where they made lasting friendships.

Mrs. McMaster saw Port Alice first in her mid-teens, when she made a round trip with her father, Capt. Ed Gillam, master of the CPR. Ss Princess Maquina.

Next time was in 1929 when she and her husband Angus and their small daughter Flora were aboard the Princess Norah on her first official passenger trip. Their destination was Port Alice where Angus was going to work at the mill.

"We planned to stay two years," Irmgard says today. Instead they were there 30 years and her husband died up there.

Barbara Miskiman went to Port Alice as a bride. She traveled in the Union Steamship's Catala fro Vancouver to Port Hardy. From there an ancient taxi took the newlyweds to Coal Harbor "over a rough trail that was part corduroy" to meet the mail boat from Granby which took them the rest of the way to Port Alice where Miskiman was in the mill employ.

In those long ago days "Alice" was a company town. "There were no electric light or water bills to pay and rents were very low."

If you lived "down the trail . . . on the other side of the mill" the rent was only $6 a month. "Nearly every newcomer did live over there for at least six weeks, until they decided whether they would stay or not."

Rain was a big factor in those decisions, Barbara Miskiman says. "It could come down for weeks on end and there were people who couldn't stand that. They were the ones who got out."

Those who stayed soon learned to love the place, Mrs. McMaster added. "They established friendships . . . made their own fun and settled down to enjoy life."

Fun included both indoor get-togethers and outdoor sports, and, of course golf.

That game started back in 1926 when two men buried a couple of tobacco cans on a bit of land near the mill and attempted to play between those two holes.

The doctor up there at the time (Name of Street) heard of this and although he was not a golfer himself, decided it would be splendid exercise for people who were past football and baseball age.

He went to the mill manager, W. L. Ketchen, and before long a piece of land, big enough for five holes, was designated as a golf course.

By 1935 the course had been enlarged to nine holes. "It was far from perfect," Mrs. McMaster says, "and very expensive to keep up as the ground was so rough."

Mrs. Miskiman remembers the early course "was all bumps and hollows, up hills and down dales. When you hit a ball you hoped it would go straight but you never knew for the next hole was usually around a corner. Indeed, there was a time when one hole was located on a scow."

First clubhouse "was small and crowded." It had been a Japanese community hall, then a bunkhouse for mill workers, before the golf club got it.

Then, after Rayonier took over, and when the mill was expanded and the old company town was abandoned for a new and modern townsite "the old schoolhouse came up for grabs."

A gym was chopped off and sent to Mahipta River. The middle portion was sold to Coal Harbor. "And through a golf club member who was also a school trustee, the two rooms that were left were acquired for a clubhouse."

These two rooms were restored and furnished. Today one is designated for meetings and quiet gatherings and the other, set up with bar and cabaret-style tables and chairs, is for dancing.

While they lived in Port Alice, three more girls arrived in the McMaster family and two girls and a boy in the Miskiman home. There were other children in the town, too.

As these boys and girls grew toward school years, Barbara Miskiman, a teacher before marriage, was persuaded to open a kindergarten in the basement of her home — the first in Port Alice and perhaps the first in British Columbia.

Day that kindergarten opened, 27 youngsters were registered. "I charged $1 a week," she tells you, "and if a child was sick and didn't attend, the parents didn't pay."

Mrs. Miskiman ran the kindergarten for seven years, then taught for another four years in the elementary school before leaving the town when her husbasnd retired because of ill health.

Eventually they came to Victoria where she joined the correspondence department of the provincial government, from which she retired a few years ago.

Irmgard McMaster is remembered in Port Alice for the junior golf club groups she organized. "I always had around 40 children playing," she says. "It was a chancey business at times. If there were cougars in the vicinity we had to stop playing and go home. And often we had black bears watching us from the sidelines."

She, too, became a teacher after her husband's death— at "Alice", Ocean Falls and eventually in Victoria, where she is now retired.

She still has a daughter living "up there" and she goes back periodically on visits.

Mrs. Miskiman, on the other hand, had only been back once before this present trip. "That was 11 years ago. It was still a company town then. Now everything is changed."

There's a modern new townsite where she remembers "nothing but forest." the golf course, now 10 holes "while still up hill and down dale, has been moved and rerouted in places to make it easier to drive straight." The mill has expanded "unbelievably" and it's "all big business now."

Nevertheless, both women are quick to tell you that the same spirit of co-operation is evident "and while it is no longer a company town, everyone up there still works in the mills."

They also say that "no matter what the news says . . . no matter the rumors of lay-offs and threats of closure that have surrounded the mill through its recent pollution troubles . . . the people up there are still enthusiastic boosters and they have faith in the future of their town."

Medical Report

By WALTER ALVAREZ

I am glad to read that a simple and rapid blood test for gonorrhea has been found which can show whether or not a person's blood has serum antibodies, which the body produces when the gonorrhea germ (called a gonococcus) invades it.

Because the test can be so easily performed, it can be especially helpful in finding the women who are carriers of gonorrhea, (meaning that they do not develop sypmtoms but are capable of passing on gonorrhea to a sexual partner); I read that about 80 per cent of the women carriers do not know that they have the disease.

This is a critical moment for such a test, because today gonorrhea is epidemic in this country — a communicable disease second only to the common cold in prevalence. Last year, 718,000 new cases were officially reported, but authorities had good reason for believing that only a fifth of the cases are reported to public health authorities.

Even more alarming is the fact that the incidence of gonorrhea is rising 15 per cent each year. Also, the age limits for active infection seem to be broadening, and 35 per cent of reported cases are in teen-agers or young children. This means that the boy or girl, man or woman who has illicit intercourse runs a great danger of getting infected.

Also, what is bad is that the germ that produces gonorrhea has been attacked so often by penicillin or penicillin-like drugs, that it has become used to them or as we doctors say, the germ has become resistant. Now, some doctors warn that the dosage of penicillin and other antibiotic drugs needed is becoming go great that soon it may not be able to be given as a single shot into the muscle of the buttock.

One possible explanation for the increase in gonorrhea may be the use of the pill. Before oral contraception, more people used condoms, diaphragms, jellies and foams, and these provided a sort of barrier to infection, and the chance of a woman's contracting gonorrhea from a single exposure was thought to be about 40 per cent.

Now, says Dr. Nicholas Fiumara, of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, if a woman is using the pill as her only means of contraception, her chance of developing gonorrhea after a single exposure to the disease has risen to almost 100 per cent.

One of the greatest dangers with gonorrhea is that so often it is not recognized, especially in women, because, as I have said, four-fifths of the women who contract gonorrhea have none of the symptoms, such as burning on urination, or a discharge, that alert a man when he has the disease. Often the infected women remain for quite a long interval as "silent carriers", and when they do go to a doctor, it is for various genitourinary complaints that are not suspected as being related to gonorrhea, and which are treated without establishing a specific diagnosis.

Doctors are finding that there are more men who are "silent carriers" than they previously thought. In fact, in one study of men who had had sex contacts with infected women, 40 per cent of the diseased men had no noticeable symptoms. This is remarkable.

Many people think that gonorrhea is a mild and harmless disease, but it can be anything but that.

I have known it to produce in a man a miserable prostatitis (a chronic inflammation of the prostate gland, at the outlet of the urinary bladder) which left him uncomfortable for years.

Occasionally, the germ of gonorrhea gets up into the heart and does damage there. Sometines it will go into one of the person's joints and cause much trouble.

It can cause sterility in a man and in a woman. In many cases it plugs up the tubes that run from a woman's uterus out to the ovaries, and as a result, the woman becomes sterile. I read that a fifth of the women who get gonorrhea develop an inflammation in their pelvic organs, and a quarter of these women will have to have a hysterectomy.

Hello Day Today

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—This is "Hello Day." All over the world.

Everyone everywhere on Earth is invited to join in the observance. All you do: say "hello" to 10 persons you've never spoken to before. It sounds easy.

Never mind the potential harm; just turn up the corners of your mouth and say "hello" to 10 strangers. At the end of the day the world, in theory, will be a warmer and friendlier place.

This simple ceremony in friendliness is sponsored by the smiling undergraduate press of Harvard University. That's nice to know.

If in the process of "hello-ing" strangers you get bashed, arrested or giggled at, in the deep parts of your mind you'll get some satisfaction from knowing it is connected to Harvard.

There are no firm guidelines for one participating. Prudence suggests one be guided by common sense. For safety's sake.

An elderly man with a permanent leer on his face probably would be on the safer side saving his first "hello"—all of them in fact — for gents or women his own age. If he hello'd pretty young things in min-skirts he may be accused of forcing his attentions on them.

The easiest time of it on "hello" day will be by young people. Saying "hello" to 10 people in their own age bracket, each a complete stranger, happens almost every day of their lives—"Hello" day or not.

Persons who are exceedingly bashful but still moved to participate in "hello" day may consider calling 10 strangers on the phone. When the strangers answer — quicky say "hello" and hang up. This will add a touch of suspense to the observance.

For efficient types anxious to get observance of "hello day" over in a hurry, it is suggested that the required "hello" to 10 strangers be done on the bus in the morning on the way to work.

For the Couple With Everything...

LONDON — Visitors to the exhibition of the 2,000 wedding presents given to Princess Anne and Captain Mark Phillips—on view at St. James's Palace here for the next six weeks—will come away with a perplexed idea of what life style the couple is going to adopt.

Indeed, as the $1.25 gift catalogue is half an inch thick and as the presents have eaten through the State Apartments like an enveloping lava, they must be left wondering whether Mark and Anne can have any life style at all except to move out into the street and let the presents take over.

The "nobs" have taken occasion to remind the couple of their importance, not to mention their own. Sir Max Rayne, the property man, obviously does not seriously expect the newlyweds ever to have to make do with ordinary army married quarters, for he and Lady Rayne have sent a five-foot-high crystal chandelier with 12 arms and double-tier candle sconces.

Such gifts have been set out in the most handsome of the exhibition rooms, all lacquer and tapestry walls, together with other items that will help the Phillipses—should they require—to impress their guests with the fact they have a penny or two: A dozen antique bronze and brass tankards, two dozen old bronze goblets, a bowl of Worcester porcelain imitation flowers, a silver ox-cart (from the emperor and empress of Japan), and a handsome, though possibly domestically pessimistic, mahogany wood carving of the ancient art of stick fighting.

Should the princess and her husband decide, once they have reached the full bloom of the forties, that they cannot stand horses after all, they will be in serious trouble. There are at least six silver horses, not to mention (because they are pretty unmentionable) horses heads on shoehorns, horses heads on brushes, horses heads on trays and horses heads on wall plaques. At least the actual leather saddles, riding crops, horse blankets (two piles) and horses kneecaps (two piles) will have worn out by then.

Some of the gifts remind the couple that all mankind is of common clay. There are bowls and glasses and cups and table lamps and tea cosies and photograph albums; the dictionary of garden plants; a portable barbecue, a bird table, a striped umbrella, two flat-ended grog bottles as ashtrays and an electric hairdryer.

Some of the presents have, perhaps, an ambivalent edge. The smallest piece of jewellery sent by the family and fellow royalty—a ruby and diamond stick pin—came from the Earl of Harewood, divorced husband of the present Mrs. Jeremy Thorpe, who was not invited to the abbey. (Mrs. Thorpe attended the wedding with her husband, who is leader of the Liberal party.) The Soviet ambassador's magnificent lacquer box, bearing on the lid a fine painting of the newly-weds, somehow contrives an unflattering impression of the Anne's chin while making the captain look like a handsome Slav.

And those do-it-yourself amateur paintings — hardened newspapermen winced at Monday's preview and vehement republicans became mellow in their sympathy for the royal couple, should they have to look upon them. "Put it back to the wall in the garage," replied one court correspondent when asked what she herself would do with portraits of Anne that made her look variously like a drug-crazed hippie, a constipated mermaid and a mummified corpse. Undoubtedly, it is the thought that counts.

Yet behind all the errors of taste and miscalculations of social position and interests (who plays table croquet these days?), undeniably a human warmth has beeen generated. It is especially touching in the children who have given picture books and designed their own cards—"Dear Princess Anne and Lieutenant Phillips, I hope you have a lovely wedding and I hope you like the pictures we have made." And the two children who contributed what is described in the catalogue as "confectionery" and turns out to be a single toffee.

Doubtless, one day, children will be indoctrinated from the age of two to give their sticky toffees not to princesses but only to the poor of Southwark; in the meantime the royal couple and the public can enjoy their generous innocence.

The exhibition opened to the public for about six weeks and the 72-cent admission charge goes to charity.

Anne's glamorous Tudor-style wedding dress and jewelled train are also on display.

Canada's official gift, a wool wall tapestry by Quebec artist Mariette Rousseau-Vermette, was delivered on the wedding eve and will have to be listed in an addition to the catalogue, in two weeks' time.

Among gifts with evident Canadian connections — no addresses are given for the donors—are a collection of postcard views of Canada, a souvenir tray from Nova Scotia, a malachite seal from the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Canada and a silver brooch with the arms of the Royal Canadian Mint.

Prince Charles gave his sister a diamond bow brooch and Mark a pair of leather guncases. Anne's brothers Edward and Andrew gave a mirror and a nest of small tables.

Prince Philip gave them a Chippendale-period writing desk, the Queen Mother a diamond and aquamarine tiara and the Queen gave to her daughter a gold-and-diamond stalactite brooch and two pairs of earrings and to Mark a beautiful gold watch and chain.

Jealousy Is Mistrust

DEAR ABBY: My wife is the private secretary to an important executive. She called me at work to tell me she was at her boss's HOUSE for a few hours to take dictation. She said he was on his "vacation" and was afraid if he went to the office he'd get tied up there all day.

I hit the ceiling, and told her in no uncertain terms that I didn't like the idea. She assured me that her boss's wife was home so I should simmer down.

An hour later I phoned the boss's house to make sure his wife was home. (she was.) Then I asked to talk to the boss. I told him it was OK this once to have my wife working at his house, but I didn't like the idea, and not to ask her again.

Well, Abby, since that happened my wife has been boiling mad at me. She said I humiliated her before her boss and his wife, and if I ever did that again, she would divorce me!

She insists I don't trust her. I do trust her, but I don't trust her boss. Do you think I was wrong to check up on her, and tell her boss how I felt?— Frankly Jealous.

DEAR FRANKLY: Yes. You showed an insulting lack of confidence in both your wife and her boss.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a man who is attractive, hard-working, honest, sober, and morally sound, but he has one failing that absolutely drives me up a wall. He is cheap from the word go!

When he takes me out (which isn't too often) we always go to the least expensive place he can find. And there can be a parking lot right next to where we're going but he drives around for half an hour to find a parking place on the street.

He tells me not to buy him anything for Christmas, because he hates to shop, and he's not buying ME anything.

Abby, I realize that he was poor when he was young, but he makes good money now, and has only himself to support.

He says he loves me, and we're discussing marriage, but I'm wondering what marriage would be like with a man who's so tight with his money. He's a beautiful person otherwise. Do you think he'll ever change?— Frustrated.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: He's a creature of habit. I doubt if he will ever enjoy spending money, but with some gentle prodding, you could loosen him up a bit. When discussing marriage, don't forget to discuss budget, or you and this "beautiful person" will be having money fights for the duration of your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is 63, has expressed the desire to move to either Arizona, California or Florida when he retires. He says he is tired of battling the Nebraska winters and wants to take it easy in a milder climate.

Abby, we've spent all our lives here, and all our family and friends are here, and I can't see us picking up and leaving all this behind to start all over again.

I'm not crazy about the winters here, either, but climate isn't everything. Don't lifelong friends, and family mean anything?

Please help me convince my husband that this is no time to pull up stakes and settle in a strange place with a bunch of strangers.

Or do you think maybe I'm the one who's wrong? He's even talking about a mobile home, or a senior citizens' community. — In a Daze.

DEAR IN: Don't make any decisions until you get a preview of the place your husband has in mind. You may be pleasantly surprised.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DOROTHY N.: Lord Byron took the words right out of my mouth when he wrote:

"All who joy would win
Must share it.
Happiness was born a twin."

Now that the evenings are becoming longer, you may find time to edit the films you have made during your summer vacation.

The 12-page brochure "Editing Your Movies" explains in detail what editing is and how it increases the enjoyment of viewing your films. Editing simply means placing some shots into a more favorable position, discarding poorly exposed and out-of-focus shots, or shortening scenes that are too lengthy.

A beginner can splice his films with the minimum of equipment: a projector, a splicer, press tapes for splicing the film lengths together, and a couple of large reels.

Illustrations will help you learn how to splice. Once you have mastered the technique, you can follow the booklet's directions for simple and for more advanced editing. Again, illustrations show you how to go about it.

When you are re-arranging the sequence of your shots, don't discard any good parts of your film which you cannot use right away. They may come in handy at a later date.

There is nothing complicated about editing your film. But keep in mind poor splicing could damage some of your best shots.

Send your request to: Photo Information Services, Kodak Canada Ltd., 3500 Eglinton Avenue West, Toronto 15, Ontario. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Blind Tackle Eye Appeal

BILL RUDKIN, co-ordinator of rehabilitation for the Montreal Association for the Blind, shows Noreen Cochrane various devices she can use to get the best use of her remaining vision. Techniques for daily living, orientation and mobility are the most important things a blind person must learn, says Mr. Rudkin.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Inky walked into the meeting room, listened to the chatter for a moment, looked around at the gathering of young women and then obediently sat down.

A moment later, she was up again, sniffing at the unfamiliar scents emanating from an array of bottles, tubes, jars and boxes on a nearby table.

Nothing in her training as a seeing-eye dog had prepared her for this situation, but a reassuring pat from owner Sharleen Waddell was all that was needed to get her to lie down under a chair.

Miss Waddell and 16 other girls had come together for a special course in skin care and make-up techniques developed by Bonne Bell cosmetics for blind teen-age girls.

Each girl was assigned a specially-trained junior counsellor from T. Eaton and Co. to assist her, and each was given a box of specially-prepared cosmetics.

"Inside the box are your make-up items, and I'm going to tell you about each one," one of the counsellors said.

"When you find it, you can take it out and put it on the table in front of the box. Line them all up so you can find them easily."

With this introduction, the course began. The girls began cleansing their faces and then started on the other cosmetics — makeup, blusher, eye shadow and a lipstick.

"I've always wanted to try," commented one girl.

"I thought it would feel gucky," said another, "but it's so light and feels so cool."

So the girls can brush up on what they have learned, they were each given a portfolio with directions in braille, a phonograph record for those who read no braille and a braille edition of a book on good groming.

David Drew of the Canadian Natinal Institute for the Blind said the course makes it easier for blind girls to compete socially in the broadest possible sense.

Hardcovers 'Not Needed' By Young Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Sandra Bassett, an instructor in literature at Algonquin College and Carleton University, fills her library shelves with tales of Dr. Seuss, Mother Goose and The Three Bears.

Considerable research assistance comes from her three children, ranging in age from four to nine.

"I practise on them all the time," she says. And with good reason. Mrs. Bassett specializes in literature for children.

Her Ottawa students are nursery school specialists, nurses, mental retardation counsellors and librarians.

Mrs. Bassett's classes follow a chronological route from the pictorial simple-language toddler's books to more complicated fiction for adolescents.

Never invest in hard-cover books for the young, advises Mrs. Bassett. "It makes more sense to buy inexpensive paperbacks or use the public libraries."

Every day parents should take the time to read to their youngsters, she says. "Bedtime is convenient, or when they're in the bath or becoming hyperactive."

TASTES CHANGE

An adult's influence decreases as children grow older and develop reading skills. "No book is good for a child unless it meets his specific needs at that particular time. Children go through stages in reading."

Parents and teachers baffled by the hundreds of books in the children's sections of libraries and stores can obtain excellent guides but a parent's aim should be to discuss what is available rather than the such-and-such-a-book must-be-read approach, says Mrs. Bassett.

She teaches that a child's attitude to books and reading depends mainly on the home environment.

"If books are important to those around them then children will also show interest." How parents handle their reading material influences a child's pride in his own library.

In one breath Mrs. Bassett says that at some point you have to lay down a few rules like having clean hands and not earing pages; in the next breath she admits that the most successful book is often the dog-eared, coverless and battered one.

"I always put my children to bed with a book and so they end up pulling them, licking them and chewing them."

AIMED AT PROBLEMS

More books are appearing on the market which, as Mrs. Bassett says, "allow children to be less idealized." Books are aimed at children with specific problems like temper tantrums, bedwetting and thumb-sucking.

Another revolution in early-reading books is based on the realization that Tom and Susan and Flip are just not enough for young readers. "Many authors are working on books, like the Dr. Seuss series, with low vocabularies and high interest."

She says an effect of television on children's reading habits is seen when children apply the same critical approach to books as they do to television. They demand more of their books and reject books that do not meet the visual standards set by TV.

Canadian books for children compete with their American counterparts in quality but not quantity, Mrs. Bassett notes.

"There is not a very extensive Canadian selection. In 1970, 92 children's books were published in Canada; in 1971 this dropped to 62. They have to compete with American publishers who spend considerable money on preparing their products."

Domestic Becomes A Judge

TORONTO (CP) — Thirty years ago, when Polish-born Irena Ungar came to Canada her first job was as a domestic.

Now she sits as a judge in a Toronto citizenship court.

"I'm very, very honored, I'm delighted," said the recently appointed judge. "This is indeed Canada. If you're loyal and a good citizen, anything can happen."

This fall Mrs. Ungar moved to the citizenship job after 18 years as an immigrant counsellor with the federal department of manpower and immigration.

In the early years of the Second World War, she worked for the Polish and French Red Cross and took on night duties for the Allied Intelligence Service, writing reports based on German newspaper articles printed in Poland.

She came to Ottawa in 1943 and a year later married Sqdn. Ldr. Waclaw J. Ungar, who after missions for the Royal Air Force over enemy territory was sent to Canada as an instructor under the Commonwealth Air Training Program.

HELPED PRISONERS

After a year in Ottawa, Mrs. Ungar moved to Toronto where she worked as payroll master and personnel officer for a wartime factory. Evenings were spent in work for the Red Cross, conducting correspondence with war prisoners and collecting clothing and parcels.

In 1970, she was awarded the Order of Canada in recognition of her contribution to the community. The following year, the Polish government in exile presented her with the Gold Cross of Merit for her long years of service to immigrant groups in Canada.

Now as a citizenship judge, she hopes to ease the tension immigrants tend to show when they apply for citizenship status.

"Because I am an immigrant too, they will feel more at home with me," she said. "I remember when I had my interview, I was so nervous I forgot my name."

Misfits Studied

TORONTO (CP) — Does he get to work on time? How does he get along with other workers?

Ralph Crystal, counsellor at the South Peel vocational centre, must ask himself questions like these. He is trying to find out why people can't keep their jobs.

The centre puts people with such problems to work there, attempting to learn the root of their job-escaping problems.

Mr. Crystal, with a master's degree in rehabilitative counselling, has been 18 months at the centre which was started originally for individuals from Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital, to prepare them for life and work in the outside world.

Now those who come are mostly young people in their teens and 20s who have never acquired successful work patterns.

Referrals to the centre come from the Toronto, Brampton and Oakville area. They are made by parents, welfare officials and sometimes by school guidance counsellors. Sixty per cent of those coming to the centre are women.

About 33 per cent of those who go through the centre's workshop are able to go out into the labor market and successfully hold a job. Another 25 per cent are able to work successfully in sheltered workshops.

Whale Sales Lashed

The Wildlife Action Society plans to protest to federal Environmental Minister Jack Davis the capture of killer whales for commercial purposes.

The society's action follows the death of Kandy, a female whale, flown from Pedder Bay in Otober to a marineland in Ontario. She died of acute pneumonia.

She was one of four whales captured by a Sealand crew in August and kept in captivity at Pedder Bay.

David Stirling, vice-president, said Davis doesn't seem to be aware the public is dead against capturing "these intelligent mammals and selling them."

"I have received many protests," he said. "The society would have no trouble raising a petition requesting an end to using whales for commercial purposes."

David Beeching, secretary-manager of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said he would like people to inform the society if they are opposed to selling live whales for commercial purposes.

"I haven't received any protests yet," he said, "but I would like to know how people feel about this."

He said he is satisfied Sealand is feeding and looking after captured whales well.

Beeching said the society protested to the government when the first killer whale was captured in 1964.

"That was when people thought whales were ravenous creatures of the sea," he said. "We have a two-inch file on the matter. But since then there has been a dead silence — no one has protested.

Sanscha Hall May Be Closed; Caught in Sharing 'Squeeze'

Sanscha Hall, the one major recreational facility serving Sidney and North Saanich is caught in the middle of a squeeze play between the municipalities.

And it won't likely know until Nov. 26 whether it will be able to open its doors in 1974.

Sidney council Tuesday night forced the issue by failing to support a bylaw exempting the hall from its yearly taxes.

Mayor Stan Dear told a special Sidney council meeting Tuesday that total taxes for Sanscha at the 1973 mill rate would be $8,058.

"There's no way Sanscha can pay $8,000 — no way," said Reg Muskett, treasurer of Sidney and North Saanich Community Hall Association.

Last year's operating costs were $12,484, said Muskett, and North Saanich has contributed nothing toward those costs.

Ald. Chris Anderson, who persuaded the majority of council to vote against the exemption, said his intentions were not to close the hall to make North Saanich aware Sidney people have been paying the costs of a facility which is also used by North Saanich residents.

If North Saanich indicates it is willing to offer financial support to Sanscha, said Anderson, "I am not too tall to put my tail between my legs and change my mind."

Royal Trust Company is trustee for the Sanscha land and if the town of Sidney was to become the trustee, said Anderson, the council would likely be more willing to pour money into Sanscha's operating costs.

"We have no jurisdiction on those grounds down there at all," he said adding he will not support spending of taxpayers money on something over which the town has no control.

Ald. Fred Robinson argued the situation would be unchanged if Sidney became the trustee.

"I just feel so badly," said Sanscha catering chairman Winnie Gardner.

Mrs. Gardner said the hall has been operated solely by volunteers and, until recently, Sidney has assisted only with the grounds.

"Up until about four years ago you had not given one red cent," she told council.

Rental chairman Eleanor Sowerby said the hall is booked year-round and there are already $6,000 worth of bookings for 1974.

But revenue could be lost if council doesn't make a decision soon because organizations needing to book the hall months in advance may look for another hall in the anticipation that Sanscha will be closed in 1974.

Sanscha director Eric Sherwood, who was elected to North Saanich council Saturday, said there is a "different look" on the new council and co-operation with Sidney will probably be much tighter.

He asked council to hold its decision in abeyance.

Ald. Peter Malcolm asked Dear if council could rescind its decision on the bylaw.

Dear said it could but would have to be done before Nov. 30. The next meeting is Nov. 26.

TRUCK FERRY ON SCHEDULE

CP Rail's truck ferry Carrier Princess was back in service between Swartz Bay, Vancouver and Nanaimo today after a day interrupted by storm damage to trailer cargo.

Most of Tuesday was devoted to clearing the jumble of toppled trailers on her decks, caused by heavy seas encountered off Saturna Island in Monday night's storm.

Thirty-six of 38 trailers were damaged and loss has been estimated as high as $150,000.

The Carrier Princess sailed from Vancouver at 10 a.m. for Nanaimo today where she is replacing the regular CP truck ferry, Princess of Vancouver, in for a refit.

After returning to Vancouver this afternoon, the Carrier Princess sails for Swartz Bay at 5:30 p.m., resuming her regular schedule.

JERICHO BEACH SOON TO BE PARK

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — After months of negotiations, the defence department is believed ready to turn over 38 acres of the contentious Jericho Beach property to the city of Vancouver for a park.

Informed sources in Ottawa say the prime property, in the hands of the defence department since the 1940s, will be turned over to the city for a "token" payment.

The defence department leased 172 acres in 1942 and then bought it in 1947. Since then a good deal of the area has been turned over to the city, but the 38 acres around Jericho Beach have become a remaining point of contention.

At one point, defence officials said the sale of the land had to cover the cost of moving defence installations to another site.

Elk Shot, Slashed With Axe

TRAIL (CP) — Rewards totalling $350 have been offered following the slaughter of a protected bull elk, one of a herd of 75 at Syringa Creek, about 30 miles north of here.

The elk was shot 11 times in the head with a .22-calibre rifle, its throat had been slashed with an axe, and another bullet was found in its hip, but lived for more than 12 hours.

The day after the animal was savaged, one of the hunters involved telephoned a conservation officer and told him what had happened, but refused to identify himself.

The hunter claimed he had mistaken the elk for a deer. He said he shot the animal with a .303-calibre rifle, and only then recognized it as an elk.

The hunter claimed he had attempted to dispatch the elk with a .22-calibre rifle.

Following the telephone call, the animal was discovered, still alive, but bleeding to death. It was shot by a conservation officer.

FALSE CREEK PLAN ALMOST CHILD-FREE

VANCOUVER (CP) — City planners presented their scheme for the development of the False Creek area to a city council committee Tuesday, with plans calling for construction of housing units for about 20,000 people along the creek's banks.

The plan calls for the builk of the housing to be for single people and for married couples without children. Families with children would be restricted to about 25 per cent of the development and 15 per cent of the housing would be for the elderly.

The plan also calls for about 140 acres of open space around the creek for parks, walkways, pedestrian and cycle paths, public markets, plazas and cafes.

Extra Police To Protect East Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Chief John Fisk will place extra police patrols in the southeast area of the city where East Indian residents are being harassed.

Mayor Art Phillips said the move was taken after several incidents against East Indians.

The mayor said while the problem does not appear to be widespread, it is deplorable and the city intends to "nip it in the bud."

Luxury Liner Going for Bids

VANCOUVER (CP) — Something for the man who has everything: a 294-foot-long luxury cruise ship will go on the auction block next month just 12 days before Christmas.

The vessel, now ensconced in Vancouver harbor, is the Xanadu, a German-built passenger vessel that most recently saw service as a cruise ship on the Pacific coast.

The bidding starts at 9:30 a.m. PST Dec. 13, but those interested had better come armed with pen and chequebook. Rock-bottom price as set by the Federal Court of Canada, is $1.5 million.

The Xanadu, built in Hamburg, Germany, in 1955, is, according to advertisemen published by court officials Tuesday, in "excellent condition" and was "completely refurnished and exotically decorated in late 1972."

She was taken out of service in September and has been the subject of litigation. The vessel was previously engaged in cruises to Alaska, Mexico, Panama and Ecuador's Galapagos Islands.

The 2,559-ton Xanadu comes complete with a dining salon seating 120, a nightclub lounge and enough cabin space to accommodate 175 passengers comfortably.

McGeer Admits No Match to NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer came out strongly Tuesday night in favor of a new, unified non-socialist opposition making "a fresh start with a completely new party."

In a hard-hitting speech to Vancouver-Centre Liberals, the Point Grey MLA chastised all three opposition parties — including his own, which he declared is "suffering from a chronic credibility gap."

"The opposition is weaker now than at any time in my experience," McGeer declared.

"A fresh start with a completely new party might succeed in bringing out the best in the existing parties and making the opposition an effective force in the legislature," he said.

At present, he said, "none of the opposition parties looks like a winner in the foreseeable future . . . despite the fact the majority of voters in the province clearly prefer free enterprise over socialism."

He accused the Conservatives of splitting the free-enterprise vote, the Liberals of failing to establish a rural base, and Social Credit of being "trapped by its own past record."

Man Jailed in Gun Threat

A man who grabbed his common-law wife by the throat, then threatened to shoot her and her two daughters was sentenced to six months in jail by Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

David Manhas, 32, pleaded guilty to the charges — two counts of pointing a firearm and two counts of assault causing bodily harm. They arose over a domestic quarrel.

Prosecutor Gordon MacDonald said Manhas had been living with Diane Mollin, 1414 Hillside, for seven months, when, on Nov. 8 she asked him to leave.

He did but returned four hours later bearing candy and flowers.

When she reiterated her decision to end the relationship, Manhas became enraged, MacDonald said. He threw the flowers across the bedroom and pushed her to the floor, grabbing her by the throat.

Mollin's two children, Jill, 14, and Tanya, nine, started to cry. The accused reached under the bed and found a .303 calibre rifle which he pointed at Mrs. Mollin and told her he had four shells — one for each of them.

MacDonald said Manhas then went to the hallway where the two girls had gone to get out of his way. He grabbed Jill around the neck, pushed her to the floor and pointed the rifle at her, telling her she was going to "get it first."

The youngster screamed; then Manhas pointed the gun at Tanya, MacDonald said.

According to the police report, Mrs. Mollin was too terrified to leave. She sat for about two hours talking to Manhas trying to calm him down before she managed to get out on the pretence of buying some cigarettes.

When police arrived they found the rifle under a couch in the living room but were unable to find any shells.

Judge Ostler said there were "no mitigating features" to the case.

"There has been a marked, alarming and unacceptable increase in crimes of this type in this area.

"It is getting out of hand," he said. "It is really becoming alarming."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two youths were sent to jail Tuesday to get trade training "in their own best interests."

Stephen Gregory Kuro, 17, of 1092 Jenkins, and Andrew Bernard Harling, 19, of 775 Station, pleaded guilty in provincial court Nov. 5 to five counts of breaking and entering and four of theft.

The charges stemmed from a series of incidents in Colwood Sept. 18, 19 and 20, culminating in the theft of a safe and $1,000 cash from Bob's Burgers, 1681 Island Highway, on Oct. 20.

Judge William Ostler said a term in jail would be "in their best interests in the long run" as it would provide "a setting of discipline and control" for them to take trade training.

"It's what you need," he told them. "Up to now you have had a pretty wretched time. I would like you to accept (going to jail) as a good thing to try."

He sentenced Kuro to six months with the "strong" recommendation he be sent to Haney to take a trade course, and Harling to three months in a forestry camp followed by 10 months probation.

As a warning to others that defrauding the welfare department "will not be treated lightly," Ostler sentenced 19-year-old Steven Gregory Monnon, 4223 Shelbourne, to three months in jail.

Monnon pleaded guilty Oct. 24 to defrauding the Saanich welfare department of $544 between March and September of this year. Police said he listed his common-law wife and baby as dependents when in fact they were receiving welfare from the City of Victoria.

"It's a type of case that unfortunately is no stranger to the courts," the judge said.

He said the circumstances of offenders and offences "vary markedly" and for that reason "so do the sentences."

"But here we have a brazen and substantial fraud," Ostler said. "And done by what the probation officer called an impudent young man engrossed in self gratification."

In addition to the jail term, Ostler placed Monnon on one year's probation following his release and ordered restitution be made to Saanich welfare department.

Gary Geofferey LeSueur, 21, of 1887 San Pedro was sentenced to 14 days in jail and placed on two years probation when he pleaded guilty before Judge Fred Green to possession of heroin.

Charge stemmed from an incident Aug. 17 when drug officers stopped him on Broughton and, after some struggle, found a cap of heroin he had hidden in his mouth.

One man was sent to jail and another fined when both pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

A 14-day jail sentence was given to Wayne Hugh Price, 21, of No. 1, 1465 Fort, who admitted a prior conviction for possession of the drug last May.

Price was charged after police checking a car in the 600-block Trutch earlier Tuesday morning found a bag of marijuana which the accused admitted was his.

Michael Charles Blencoe, 17, of 3333 Keats, was fined $75. The charge was laid after Saanich police found a half-ounce bag of marijuana on him early Saturday morning at Canterbury and Douglas.

Herbert James Harris, 38, of 2850 Dysart, was sentenced to two months in jail followed by one year's probaion for possession of stolen property.

Harris pleaded guilty to the charge Monday. He bought a telephone answering recorder Nov. 3 for $10 and pawned it for $35. The recorder, worth $395 had been reported stolen from B.C. Travel, 1029 Douglas.

In Judge Alder's traffic court on Monday, Norman Elliott Neely, 48, of 3971 Cedarwood, was fined $350 and lost his licence for three months after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Oct. 18 on Douglas Street.

Edwin G. Lewis, 60, of 2936 Queenston Avenue, received the same penalty for impaired driving Sunday at Government and Fisgard. He was fined another $200 after pleading guilty to refusing to provide a breath sample.

Raymond Carriere, 37, of 6-1585 Oak Bay Avenue, was fined $100 after pleading guilty to leaving the scene of an accident Sept. 29 in the 1400-block Pandora.

Public Say Urged In School Matters

WINNIPEG (CP) — A provincial government task force has recommended a major overhaul of post-secondary education to provide more opportunities to more Manitobans and give the public a larger say in how the whole system is run.

In its final report released Tuesday, the seven-member task force called for new thrusts into community-based regional education programs and greater emphasis on the development of community colleges.

And it suggested the creation of an external studies evaluation board to award degrees, diplomas and certificates to persons who have experience or expertise in a field, but not the traditional academic background.

—No substantial increases in tuition at any Manitoba institutions of higher learning;

—More generous bursaries for students who need assistance but also more student loans without regard to the family resources of the student;

—Continuation of the University of Manitoba as the prime centre for post-graduate education in the province;

—Day care centres and committees on the status of women at major centres of higher learning;

—Appointment of an ombudsman for post-secondary education.

Underlying the recommendations are the beliefs the public has the right to know what's happening at its institutions as well as the right to have some influence over the decisions made.

The report urges members of the general public sit on many of the boards and commissions proposed for the new system of higher education and that open meetings be the rule, rather than the exception, in the system.

The large majority of the proposals in the task force report are refinements from an interim report issued in January. The interim report met mixed reactions, with strong criticism coming from the board of governors of the University of Manitoba and support from the school's faculty association.

Under the task force proposals, an autonomous commission for post-secondary education would have the responsibility for allocating funds, planning and regulating proposals from individual institutions.

The commission would also have separate divisions for universities, community colleges and regional education programs, with each division having citizen members and authority within its own area of higher education.

The new structure would replace functions now split between the department of colleges and universities and the universities grants commission.

Generally, the task force report concludes that the present educational system fails to meet the needs of special or minority groups or persons in remote areas of the province.

One proposal to eliminate this failure is a regional education program, organized in response to grass-roots interest in areas as small as an Indian reserve or as large as an area served by several high schools.

The basic organizational unit in each area would be a district organized by local residents, who would select a committee to arrange for special educational services.

The task force envisages contracts with other institutions to fill local needs, with courses taught in existing facilities such as schools, community centres or church halls.

For the most remote communities, however, the report suggests specialized television instruction, mobile classrooms, or specially-equipped trailers, railway cars and boats.

GUN USED TO OBTAIN GAS FILL-UP

WESTERBURG, West Germany (AP) — Police are looking for an unknown Mercedes limousine driver who insisted on buying a full tank of gasoline Tuesday at a service station.

Told he could get only four gallons due to the current shortage, the driver drew a pistol and forced the attendant to fill the tank.

He paid his bill of about $22 and raced away, his car loaded to the brim with about 18 gallons of gas.

The attendant wanted to take down the man's licence number, but the plate had been removed from the rear of the car.

Kibbutz Pulling For Old 'B.G.'

SDE BOKER, Israel (AP) — While David Ben-Gurion fights for his life in a Tel Aviv hospital, his friends and neighbors in this Negev Desert kibbutz keep in contact three times a day by telephone.

"Part of the kibbutz has practically moved into the hospital with him" said Pnina Buchbinder, the kibbutz postmistress who sometimes types his memoirs. "Joshua Cohen, his closest friend here, seldom leaves the beside and keeps us informed of his condition by telephone."

Ben-Gurion, 87, was still in serious condition following a cerebral hemmorhage Sunday that left his right side paralysed.

Sde Boker, deep in the Negev Desert, is where Israel's founding father found peace and fulfilment after 15 stormy years as his young country's first premier.

Before he entered the hospital, the old man took a two-mile walk around the kibbutz twice a day. A spectacularly-plumed parrot called out "stiom," as he passed by and he always stopped at the cage for a chat, friends recall.

Ben-Gurion was born David Gryn in a wooden house on the Street of the Goats in the unpaved Jewish quarter of Plonsk, a small market city 40 miles northwest of Warsaw, Poland.

From the time Ben-Gurion arrived deck class in a Russian freighter in the old crusader port of Jaffa in 1906, he looked upon himself mainly as a farmer and a pioneer come to reclaim the land of his ancestors.

He was 19 then and his dreams of building a Jewish homeland were inflamed by the Bible stories his Russian grandfather told him. He took the Hebrew name of Ben-Gurion, which means lion cub, and went to work pushing a plow behind a pair of oxen in the Jordan Valley at Israel's first kibbutz.

A half-century later, the man who declard Israel's independence returned to the land and insisted that his name be put on the blackboard at Sde Boker for work assignments like anyone else.

After he passed his 75th birthday, Ben-Gurion worked less in the fields and more on his memoirs, but he never gave up his yoga exercises. He taught himself Arabic in the belief that Arabs and Jews would one day "live side by side in peace as naturally as Swedes and Norwegians."

Argentina To Shelter Vesco

NASSAU, The Bahamas (UPI) — Fugitive financier Robert Vesco admitted Tuesday he has been granted a visa to live in Argentina, but he said it was not because he wants to escape extradition to the United States.

A spokesman for Vesco issued a late-night statement commenting on published reports the Argentine government had granted the financier permission to live in the country under a grant of immunity from extradition.

The spokesman said the reports that Vesco had received a residence permit in Argentina were based on "incomplete information supplied by agents of the U.S. government."

The statement acknowledged Vesco obtained a permit to live in Argentina. It said the visa was necessary for him to conduct business there.

Second Prison Guard Stabbed

STILLWATER, Minn. (AP) — Stillwater state prison authorities Monday ordered a general lockup of the 720 prisoners and a search for weapons and other contraband, in the wake of the second stabbing of a guard by a prisoner.

Jerome Hughes, 38, was the second guard to be stabbed in a week. The stomach wound was not serious.

September's UIC Cheque Total Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance payments fell to $122 million in September, the fourth month in 1973 that payments were less than the corresponding month last year, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The September total was $13 million or nine per cent below August and $6 million or five per cent lower than September, 1972. Payments this year in May, June and August were also lower than in those months in 1972.

In British Columbia, total payments were $15,936,000, down $2,269,000 for the month and down $39,000 for the year; average payments were $73.42, down $1.16 for the month and up $5.64 over the year.

Earlier this month, Manpower Minister Robert Andras announced an expected total deficit this year of $335 million in the amount of unemployment payments above the amount of employer and employee contributions. He also announced the jobless pay tax will go up next year.

In September, payment totals declined in all provinces and territories except Saskatchewan compared with the month before. Payments compared with September a year ago were higher in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, the Yukon and Northwest Territories, and the rest were lower.

The Maritime provinces have experienced higher unemployment rates this year than the rest of Canada.

IT'S JUST AS GOOD . . . OOPS!

WINNIPEG (CP) — An official of an all-terrain vehicle manufacturing company demonstrated the product's strength by jumping several times on the hull — and plunged right through the plastic body.

"I find that the demonstration revealed a hidden defect . . ." said Mr. Justice Louis Deniset of Court of Queen's Bench in a written judgment relieving the original purchaser from paying for the machine.

Own Bylaw Broken

Saanich is breaking one of its own bylaws by not providing adequate screening for properties surrounding the Victoria-Saanich public library branch on Vernon.

"We are breaking our own bylaw," public works committee chairman Ald. Bill Campbell said Tuesday. "It should be screened or fenced."

The committee will recommend that the work be ordered by the 1974 council.

It was not a unanimous decision.

"We built the library," Ald. Edith Gunning observed, "and it should be our responsibility."

PEDESTRIAN KILLED

DUNCAN — An 18-year-old pedestrian was struck and killed by a transport truck Tuesday night while walking down the centre line of the Trans-Canada Highway two miles south of Duncan.

RCMP said Marie Louie, believed to be from the Duncan area, was pronounced dead on arrival at Cowichan District hospital.

Coroner Tom Lines will perform an autopsy before deciding whether to hold an inquest or inquiry.

Wanted: Instant Families

Three Central American teenagers are looking for Victoria families to "adopt" them for 10 weeks this winter.

The students will be in the city from Dec. 11 until Feb. 20 as part of the Intercambio Exchange Program.

The boys are Edgar Acosta, 16, and Alberto Chaves, 15, of Costa Rica and Alvaro Herdocia, 13, of Nicaragua. All speak some English, though Edgar will need help and patience with his, says Llona O'Gorman of 2904 Phyllis, who is organizing their say.

Host families are expected to give their visitor room and board and make him part of the family, she said.

Three other Central American exchange students are also coming, and have been placed already.

Mrs. O'Gorman said the teenagers are on holidays from their schools at home, but will attend Victoria secondary schools while they are here.

In the summer Victoria students will visit Central American countries and they will attend classes in schools there.

Youths Charged

COQUITLAM (CP) — Five youths appeared in court here Tuesday charged with obstructing a peace officer and causing a disturbance. They were released from custody on their own recognizance and remanded until Dec. 4. They are Paul Edmond Alain, 17, Ronald Denis Beaudin, 17, Gerald Denis Hendi, 19, Paul Vandenbussche, 18, and Kenneth Douglas Coulter, 17.

Schools Seek Parent Views

Two public meetings to get views of students, parents and teachers on education in the province will be held by Saanich school board.

First meeting is Thursday at 8 p.m. in Claremont senior secondary, 4980 Wesley. Second is Nov. 29 at 8 p.m. in Parkland senior secondary, 10640 Macdonald Park Rd.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly asked all school boards in the province to hold these public meetings in high schools before Dec. 10 to provide public input into the B.C. commission on education.

Greater Victoria school board is planning to hold meetings in Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Reynolds and Victoria senior secondary schools in early December, but definite dates have not been set.

Fox received 553 votes to Sweet's 303.

Just Once In The Drink

ST. LOUIS, P.E.I. (CP) — Arthur Gaudet fell overboard once.

That's not bad if you have been a deep-sea fisherman for more than 40 years and have never learned to swim.

Mr. Gaudet is a Miminiegash fisherman.

Or at least he will be until he retires next year.

"Just plain foolishness" was one of the reasons he fell into Northumberland Strait.

He says of the incident years ago that he had raised a distress flag when his engine broke down. Another boat took him in tow in rough seas but the tow line kept coming loose.

In an attempt to keep the line on his boat, he reached to grab and secure it. As he did, it came loose again.

"I just forgot to let go—the line wrapped around my leg and before I knew what happened I was dragged overboard."

He kicked away from the boat after he came to the surface, first bumping his head on the boat's hull. The attempt to rescue him by his helper was in vain.

Fortunately the crew of the tow boat noticed his plight and managed to save him.

STARTED EARLY

He doesn't remember why he became a fisherman.

As a teen-ager he signed on as a helper on a boat and managed to save enough within two years to set out on his own.

He operated out of Miminiegash with some hired hands and, for a few years, with the help of his sons.

He has braved his share of storms in the Northumberland Strait but shrugs the experiences off, saying the storms were never so rough that he couldn't make it to port.

Mrs. Gaudet doesn't look at the dangers so lightly, but their home is a few miles from the sea and she hardly ever knew how rough it was during the storms.

He remembers that the storms took their toll—men, boats and gear—but the fishing went on.

WORKED ELSEWHERE

During the hungry '30s Arthur Gaudet and many others went to the lumber camps in New Brunswick. Often he was away for five months at a time, earning enough to keep his family from going hungry.

During the Second World War he worked in the dockyard in Halifax.

On Oct. 25, Arthur Gaudet, the man who has longest served the fishing industry from Miminiegash Harbor, was honored in conjunction with Fishermen's Centennial Day—a celebration during Centennial Year in Prince Edward Island.

He and two other fishermen from the West Prince area were honored at the special ceremony.

Next year, he says, he will devote more time to his hobbies—carpentry and plumbing.

'Noses Thumbed' At West

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker Monday accused the railways of "thumbing their noses" at western Canada by delaying shipments of wheat.

He told a news conference the railways are 75 million bushels behind in their deliveries to terminals at Thunder Bay and Vancouver.

"And the reason is that they know there's more revenue in shipping other commodities. The railway companies are thumbing their noses at the people of Western Canada."

He urged the federal government to vest some power with the official controlling the flow of railways cars.

"If they don't do so, the railway companies can only have a detrimental effect on the people of Western Canada."

He also attacked the federal government's energy policy, calling it "a consolidated shambles of uncertainty."

There must be a policy established in which Canada would have the first priority for its own oil, he said.

25 Years Flying . . . No Fatalities

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Armed Forces' Air Transport Command (ATC), which began 25 years ago, hasn't lost a passenger yet.

Between the elderly DC-3 Dakotas and the North Stars of 1948, and the sleek Boeing 707s and thundering Hercules of today, there have been some crew fatalities, but no accidents affecting passengers.

"I hesitate to mention this because you know what happens to a pitcher after someone says he's got a no-hitter going," said Maj.-Gen. Hugh McLachlan, 50, ATC commanding officer.

Maj.-Gen. McLachlan presides over a fleet of 75 aircraft, coast to coast, 7,500 men and women in uniform, and 2,700 civilians. His fleet includes five Boeing 707s and 23 Hercules.

The ATC operating budget alone, which doesn't include service and civilian salaries, is about $37.3 million for 1973-74.

Along with supplying Arctic outposts, running transatlantic operations in support of Canada's troops in Europe and Cyprus, hauling five million tons of grain and dry milk to drought-ridden Niger over a six-week period, and running searches for lost civilian aircraft, ATC had planned a celebration for its silver anniversary.

Although the date was set in April, air and ground festivities were planned for mid-September, when the public is customarily invited to the base for the air show.

But weather, an old ATC enemy, socked in the airport and not one aircraft took off.

While it hasn't lost a passenger, the command has lost —and is losing—many highly trained, experienced pilots to the commercial airlines. The leak is not as bad as in the 1960s, when the airlines were so hungry for good men they practically camped outside bases in Germany and wined and dined fliers at the best hotels. This year, 134 pilots have applied for premature release—after a minimum of five years with the armed forces—from the service, 32 of them from ATC's total of 350.

Maj.-Gen. McLachlan said about 30 will go to better-paying airline jobs; the others are older men taking early pensions.

Maj. Jerry Foster, 44, ATC staff officer for flight safety, said he receives about $18,000 a year and estimates his pension at $9,000.

A friend with whom he started flying in Winnipeg is an Air Canada captain who gets $35,000 a year and can look forward to a pension of about $25,000, he said.

ATC had its beginnings in the Second World War directorate of air transport, which was formed in 1943. It co-ordinated the ferrying of aircraft across Canada and the airlifting of freight, mail and personnel to the various war theatres.

Over the years, ATC aircraft have airlifted troops and supplies to the Korean war, supported United Nations peacekeeping forces in Egypt, the Congo and Cyprus, flown countless miles on mercy missions to famine, drought and earthquake-seared lands, and ferried royalty and Canada's diplomats to other countries.

OXFAM: Only Hope for a Starving People

The London Observer

DESSIE, Ethiopia — Sprawled on his back on a stone road half-a-mile from the destitutes' shelter at Haik lay the body of an old, grey-bearded man. Flies crawled over his mouth and nose as passers-by skirted the corpse with barely a glance.

In Ethiopia's Wollo province today little enough can be done for the living, and the dead are ignored.

The old man was just another among hundreds of nameless victims of a disaster which passed unnoticed for months outside Ethiopia.

For over 400 kilometres from the capital, Addis Ababa, I had driven over the now crumbling road built by the Italians during the Abyssinian campaign, through Mussolini Pass and across the fertile mountainous landscape to Dessie, capital of Wollo province.

Fields of maize, corn and peas, turning brown as the harvest and dry season approach, cloaked the reality of a disaster which, the United Nations estimate, has cost 50,000 to 100,0000 lives.

The old man's body ended the illusion of rugged beauty which distinguishes this part of Ethiopia. He had been too far gone to make the Haik shelter. Many who reach the camp do not survive.

While I was there a group of spindle-legged men shuffled across the compound carrying a tin trough.

A 12-year-old girl had just died in one of the squalid galvanised shelters where the destitutes huddle together covered in dirty rags with only rush mats between them and the earth floor.

Almost 18,000 people are still in Wollo's 13 shelters. At the peak in June, July and August they were dying at the rate of 100 a day. Emergency feeding had reduced this to about 20 daily now, but disease still threatens them, for they are vulnerable because of malnutrition.

Now there are few beggars on Haik's main street. "You should have been here two months ago. Then there were thousands, and trucks took away 20 to 30 bodies every day," a man said in the town's main hotel.

The full scale of the catastrophe is not yet known, but it is such that this nation, which once mourned its dead with public wailing and weeping, has now lost its voice.

Thirty-year-old Argashe Abate, in a listless monotone, said she had buried her husband and four eldest children in eight days. When the crops failed last December and the rains in March, her husband, Hassan, sold their six acres of land and took a job as a farm laborer.

But he was so weakened by malnutrition that he became sick and died. The family had no food, and within a week her son Muhammad, aged nine, and daughters Nurie, five, Ergoye, three, and Fatima, two, were all dead.

Argashe, with her year-old surviving daughter, walked for three days to reach the Haik shelter, but there the last child died.

Getawa Fantew is a nine-year-old orphan. For months his family were short of food and when they left their village in April about six people were dying each day. In Haik he watched his parents die on the street and then begged and stole to live.

Abraham Kasa, aged 32, was comparatively wealthy. But in the past four years he had to sell three of his four plots of land to buy food. Then, early this year, five of his cattle died and he sold the remaining five.

Finally, in April, he sold his last plot of land for £12, half the normal price.

A few days later his wife Lete, died. Then his two sons. With his last child, Sindayu, an eight-year-old girl, he walked for two weeks to reach Haik, and they now serve other people, having recovered their health on protein concentrate diet.

The cases of Abraham and Argashe illustrate one of the most revolting aspects of the disaster. Wherever there is death the vultures gather, and here many are human. Starving peasants have been forced to sell their lands, cows, oxen and the crop due in December at half the normal price to survive.

Officials have sold emergency feeding cards which should be distributed free, and merchants have doubled grain prices in their shops. A number of officials are detained.

In mid-June, Emperor Haile Selassie removed the Wollo acting-Governor General, Sololeman Abraham. Six students were shot dead and an unknown number wounded during a demonstration against the provincial administration.

Officials at Dessie firmly believe the bulk of the disaster could have been averted if reports coming in from sub-district governors had been acted upon and sent to the government in Addis Ababa.

It was not until March when destitutes reached the capital from Wallo that it was realized in Addis Ababa that people were starving. The provincial administration failed to respond to inquiries, and a team from five ministries was sent to investigate.

Six days later they reported back, and within 48 hours the Crown Council had met and set up a relief committee. But by then it was too late.

The emperor has ordered an inquiry into the Wollo administration. In mid-July he appointed a tough minister of state, Legesse Bezou, as the province's new acting-Governor General.

Bezou and the relief agencies have now turned the tide of starvation and for this great credit must go to an Irish priest, Father Kevin Doheny, head of the Catholic relief services here.

When the Churches were called in last May, Father Doheny sent out world-wide appeals for aid and mobilized the Oxford Commmittee for Famine Relief (Oxfam) whose team of doctors and nurses have done so much to cut the death toll.

Nonetheless those in the camps, as well as the 220,000 or more who have returned to their lands, are still weak and vulnerable to diseases such as cholera, typhus, malaria, dysentry and gastro-enteritis. Epidemics have killed hundreds in the shelters and urban centres.

At the Kumbulcho shelter near Dessie, two British volunteer nurses have spent the past month feeding the undernourished. In practice that should be everybody, but only those whose bodyweight is less than 75 per cent of normal receive the emergency protein concentrates. The rest are getting grain supplied by the government.

Apathy and indifference mark the malnutrition cases. But a British paediatrician, Dr. Andrew Clymo, argues that the role of the medically highly-qualified Oxfam team stirring and serving food in the past month has been the most valuable.

"We are doing what is most important for these children at the moment, providing a protein diet."

I watched one man at Haik, his face etched deep with despair, bring his two surviving children for emergency food. One boy aged about three had to be hand-fed, and he was dead the next day. The other was aged 10 and covered in a white shroud to protect him from the sun.

His legs were like matchsticks, ribs protruding, face gaunt and apathetic and eyes dulled. He also is expected to die.

If the past is grim then the future is also bleak. There are hundreds of orphans and widows. Even those with somewhere to go back have no seed to plant and no oxen to plough.

The government plans to distribute seed and oxen on credit, but few of the people in the rural areas can withstand another serious drought.

Of the 283,000 destitutes registered in the urban centres, 220,000 have made their way back to the land.

People who bought land at a pittance at the height of the famine will be repaid the money by the government and forced to return it. Somehow that seems far too kind a finale for those who preyed on the starving.

INDIAN UNREST AT MOOSOMIN

SASKATOON (CP) — The Indian and northern affairs department said Tuesday it is investigating unrest on the Moosomin Reserve about 20 miles north of Battleford.

Keith Gavigan of Regina, a department spokesman, said he and other officials are to meet band council and dissident groups on the reserve.

The meeting results from a petition signed by 50 people calling on Ottawa to suspend all self administration and all democratic processes on the reserve.

Copies of the petition were sent to Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs, members of parliament and the news media.

The petition specifies charges against band leaders and alleges that band funds were in danger.

Power Workers Ready to Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — A strike by 600 city power employees could occur anytime. After today unless a contract settlement is reached, a union official said Tuesday.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers local voted 91.2 per cent in support of strike action last week in a contract dispute with the city and union negotiators served notice on the city Monday. City officials said supervisory personnel would maintain the system in the event an agreement cannot be reached, however new installations would be stalled, meters would not be read and other maintenance functions would cease in a strike situation. During any strike a major power failure would be serious.

Beavers Target of New Program

EDMONTON (CP)—Beavers and animals that kill livestock will be targets of a special control program this winter, Dave Unger, an official with the Alberta Fish and Wildlife Division, said Tuesday.

The division has formed a seven-man problem wildlife team to deal with wolves and coyotes responsible for livestock losses. That team will complement a similar team of predator control specialists.

Water Supplies Threatened

WINNIPEG (CP) — A massive irrigation project planned for North Dakota could threaten water supplies of two Manitoba communities and turn Lake Winnipeg into a slimy green lake, a Manitoba government official said Tuesday.

Nestor Mudry, director of planning, water resources branch, of the department of mines and natural resources, said the Garrison Dam and irrigation project in North Dakota would have "far-reaching" consequences in Manitoba. A halt of the project has been asked by Ottawa.

Access Paths for Winter Serve as a Spring Guide

Winter access paths, particularly in newly laid out properties, may well be of a temporary kind. In fact, they will serve as experimental projects to be changed until you find their most desirable locations.

I have seen two approaches used for making temporary paths; both have advantages. One is sawdust; the other cement paving stones.

Paths of sawdust are pleasant to walk on during winter. Rain seeps down through the sawdust so that the path rarely freezes. With reasonable care you need get very little mud on top.

The tracking indoors of sawdust is avoided by the simple scraping of footwear outdoors which would have to be done anyway if covered with sticky mud. Sawdust is not nearly so messy to wipe off with a rag or brush.

A piece of angle-iron for a scraper fixed to a heavy block of wood, with a new floor scrubbing brush attached to the side of the block makes a cleaning setup easy to use. The making of it is an evening's work for an ingenious person accustomed to making useful things from scrap material.

Using the sawdust path in wet weather for reaching winter vegetables, pressing in small plants loosened by frost and wind, you discover where a permanent path would be an advantage. Or you may want to re-route the path.

A shovel to move the sawdust to the new route laid out with a garden string line and a few sticks, a bit of muscle exercise, and you have a new pathway to test.

The sawdust is not harmful to the soil. What you leave behind on the old route will be readily worked in by the time spring comes. It will have partially rotted, ready for raking over a wider area or dug in if desired.

A winter access path in the vegetable garden is the ideal place for putting in the first cabbage plants for the soil will be fairly compacted, just what the whole cabbage family needs.

The other temporary path material is the garden cement paving block, available in different sizes and shapes.

While these are heavier to juggle, they are permanent in themselves. You lay them in the route you wish to cover, moving them around as you wish.

When satisfied with the effect in your garden design and the most useful places for your paths, a sand foundation makes a durable bed for laying paving blocks. This can be done later.

Paths which entice you to the garden during so-called bad weather by making the going easy, give you a new knowledge of your plants.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

If I had to select just one deal to illustrate to a group of novices how the mind of the bridge expert functions, I believe I would choose today's deal. It is a classic one, and came up in a duplicate game in Philadelphia some years ago. South's bidding leaves much to be desired, but I question whether any other bidding sequence would be more acceptable.

Both sides vulnerable. East deals.

♠ 7 6 4
♡ Q 8 7
◇ 8 7 3

WEST
♠ 9 5 3
◇ 9 6 5 2

EAST
♠ K J 10 2
♡ K 5 2
◇ K J 10
♣ K Q 10

SOUTH
♠ A Q 8
◇ A Q 4
♣ A

East	South	West	North
1 NT	4♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

West's four of clubs opening lead was taken by South's singleton ace. It was perfectly obvious to South that East, for his vulnerable one no-trump opening bid, had, amongst other high cares, the four outstanding kings. It was equally apparent that East, by definition, had a balanced hand, which meant that each of his kings was guarded. With these "facts" serving as the foundation, declarer went about his business.

At trick two, South led the jack of trumps and overtook it with dummy's queen, East winning with the king. East returned a club, declarer ruffing with the nine-spot, after which he led the four of trumps and took it with the board's eight-spot. The diamond finesse was now taken, successfully. Next the three of trumps was led to the board's seven-spot, and a spade was played, declarer's queen being finessed. At the end, declarer conceded a spade and a diamond.

In terms of approach, declarer knew that both finesses — in spades and diamonds would be successful. The problem was to be able to get to dummy two times to take the finesses. If the ace of trumps were cashed at any time, declarer would have but one entry, since East's trump king was bound to be a winner. Further, if declarer had ruffed with either the three or four of hearts (at trick three), he would have lost an entry to dummy, since both of these cards were essential for gaining access to the board's seven and eight of trumps.

The proper play of this deal required neither genius nor brilliance. All that was needed was a marshalling of the facts that presented themselves (in the bidding) and the practical application of the knowledge obtained.

In retrospect, South's play was simple. But, had a novice been at the helm, the ending probably would have been different.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

"So these are your kids," said Ken, as the two small boys entered the room. "I thought you had three."

"We have," Judy replied. "Bob's the big one but he's away at college."

Ken smiled. 'How old are you then?" he asked the boys.

Peter grinned. "I'm half as old as bob was when Jim was half as old as I am," he declared.

Jim had been figuring too. "I'm half as old as Pete will be when I'm half as old as Bob is," he announced.

How old was Bob?

Still Innovations In First Phone Town

ST. ALBERT (CP) — This town just north of Edmonton, which received the first telephone call in Alberta 88 years ago, is becoming the first community in Canada to adopt a system of telephone innovations.

The system, designed and engineered by Northern Electric Co. Ltd. of Montreal and implemented by Alberta Government Telephones (AGT), is known as SP-1.

The service, scheduled for this month, incorporates four custom-calling services: call waiting, speed calling, three-way calling and call forwarding.

Call waiting enables the subscriber, while talking into one telephone, to answer an incoming call. He can hold the first call, then continue it, or talk back and forth between the two calls.

Speed calling permits the subscriber to reach his most frequently-called numbers by dialing just one or two digits instead of the current seven.

Three-way calling allows a third telephone connection, local or long distance, to be linked into an established call by dialling a simple code plus the number of the third party.

Call forwarding enables a subscriber to direct calls coming to one telephone, either local or long listance, to another telephone.

The new services will each cost $1.50 to $2 a month for residential use and $2.50 to $3.50 a month for business use, in addition to the existing rates for telephone rental, maintenance and long-distance calls.

The SP-1 system is more compact than conventional telephone switching systems and incorporates two computerized central-control areas which monitor each other's performance.

"If one computer is faulty it is automatically switched out of service, the fault is diagnosed by the other computer and the trouble is printed out on a teleprinter," said the spokesman.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GRUNOW — In loving memory of our dear Dede, who passed away Nov. 21, 1970.
Our hearts still ache with sadness
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose her,
No one will ever know.
Her thoughts were all so full of us,
She never could forget,
And so we think that where she is,
She must be watching yet.
As Angels keep their watch up there,
Please God, just let her know,
That we down here, do not forget,
We both loved and missed her so.
Each time we pass her photo
She seems to smile and say,
"Don't cry I'm only sleeping,
"We'll meet again some day."
—Sadly missed and always remembered by her mother and step-father.

GRUNOW — In loving memory of a dear sister, Dede, who passed away Nov. 21, 1970.
Dear Lord forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that she were here,
Others are taken yes we know,
But she was ours and we loved her so,
—Sadly missed by her sister Gerry and Family.

GRUNOW — In loving memory of my dear granddaughter Dede, taken from us Nov. 21, 1970.
*November comes with deep re*gret
A month I cannot forget
The shock was so severe
I never thought her death so near.
I do not need a special day
To bring you to my mind.
The days I do not think of you
Are very hard to find.
They say time heals all sorrow
And will help me to forget,
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
—Always remembered by Grammy Swanson.

16 WAYS TO GET BETTER GAS MILEAGE

With the gasoline shortage persisting, most drivers are increasingly concerned about getting more mileage from each tank of fuel. Clean-air devices on modern cars do detract from fuel economy, but it is possible to realize a saving by careful attention to driving and car maintenance habits. Automotive and petroleum industry people generally agree that procedures such as the following can improve gas mileage.

THE FIRST PREREQUISITE IS A WELL-TUNED, PROPERLY MAINTAINED CAR. FOLLOW ALL PERIODIC MAINTENANCE PROCEDURES AS RECOMMENDED IN YOUR OWNER'S MANUAL TO INSURE MAXIMUM VEHICLE PERFORMANCE AND FUEL ECONOMY.

THE NEXT MOST IMPORTANT DRIVING RULE IS TO GO SLOWER. THE HIGHER THE SPEED THE MORE WIND RESISTANCE YOUR ENGINE HAS TO OVERCOME BY USING MORE GAS. IF YOU REDUCE YOUR SPEED FROM 60 MPH TO 50 MPH YOU CAN SAVE 10 PER CENT OR MORE IN FUEL CONSUMPTION, WHICH IS LIKE GETTING 10 OR SO FREE MILES FOR EVERY 100 MILES YOU DRIVE.

LOOK AHEAD TO UPCOMING TRAFFIC LIGHTS. IN APPROACHING A RED LIGHT, SLOW DOWN IF TRAFFIC PERMITS AND GIVE THE LIGHT A CHANCE TO TURN GREEN. IN THIS WAY YOU DON'T HAVE TO STOP AND THEN WASTE THE GAS NEEDED TO GET THE CAR IN MOTION AGAIN.

REMEMBER THAT FAST STOPS ALSO COST FUEL. THEY WASTE COASTING TIME THAT OTHERWISE COULD HAVE ROLLED YOU UP TO A RED LIGHT OR STOP SIGN WITH PRACTICALLY NO USE OF GAS.

KEEP YOUR SPEED AS STEADY AS POSSIBLE. BEAR IN MIND THAT ECONOMY DRIVING DOESN'T CALL FOR A SLOW, ROAD-BLOCKING PACE, BUT IT DOES CALL FOR SMOOTH OPERATION OF THE CAR. EVERY QUICK ACCELERATION COSTS MONEY BECAUSE IT CALLS FOR AN EXTRA SQUIRT OF GAS INTO THE ENGINE. SMOOTH DRIVING ALSO CALLS FOR ANTICIPATING NEEDS FOR SLOW-DOWNS OR EXTRA SPEED. IN THIS WAY YOUR MANOEUVRE CAN BE MADE SMOOTHLY RATHER THAN IN GAS-EATING SPURTS.

ONE OF THE COMMONEST GAS-WASTING HABITS IS MAKING A "JACK RABBIT" START WHEN A TRAFFIC LIGHT TURNS GREEN. YOU WON'T SAVE MUCH TIME, IF ANY, BUT YOU ARE CERTAIN TO WASTE FUEL. IF YOUR CAR HAS AN AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION IT WILL UPSHIFT TO THE MORE ECONOMICAL HIGHER GEAR RANGES SOONER WITH A LIGHT THROTTLE. WITH A MANUAL TRANSMISSION, YOU CAN UPSHIFT AS SOON AS THE CAR WILL RUN SMOOTHLY IN THE NEXT HIGHER GEAR.

10
MAKE ONE SHOPPING TRIP TAKE THE PLACE OF TWO OR THREE. STOCK UP ON FOOD TO CUT DOWN ON TRIPS TO THE STORE. CONFINE SHOPPING TO A FEW AEAS TO CUT DOWN MILEAGE FROM STORE TO STORE.

11

12

13
A DIRTY AIR CLEANER RESTRICTS THE FLOW OF AIR TO THE CARBURETOR, CAUSING THE ENGINE TO RUN ON A RICHER MIXTURE — WHICH IS A HIGHER-THAN-NORMAL RATIO OF FUEL TO AIR.

14
SPARK PLUGS THAT MISFIRE ONLY TWO PER CENT OF THE TIME (A RATE THAT WOULDN'T BE NOTICED BY THE AVERAGE MOTORIST) SPEW GASOLINE OUT THE EXHAUST PIPE. HAVING REGULAR SPARK PLUG CHECKS CAN SAVE THIS FUEL.

15
A DIRTY OR FAULTY CARBURETOR OR A STICKING AUTOMATIC CHOKE WASTES GAS AND CONTRIBUTES TO AIR POLLUTION. HAVE YOUR MECHANIC CHECK THESE AND OTHER AREAS HE MAY FIND TO BE GAS WASTERS.

THE COOLING SYSTEM THERMOSTAT IS A FACTOR IN FUEL ECONOMY. A FAULTY OR IMPROPER THERMOSTAT CAN WASTE GAS BY PROLONGING ENGINE WARM-UP IN COLD WEATHER.

Announcing the Beginning of the End

The last self-owned apartments on Beach Drive

Frankly, when we started we never expected to be able to build such an exceptional apartment featuring such spacious and luxuriously appointed rooms throughout, still provide a planned recreation complex that has its own sauna room, exercise pavilion, therapeutic pool, hobby room, freezer room and underground electronically secured parking.

Naturally, the location and setting here on Beach Drive can never be replaced. This is your year 'round view.

Close to the world-famous Oak Bay Marina and Restaurant, a constant parade of graceful yachts and cruisers, lovely Windsor Park, rose gardens and just about anything else you would want at the Oak Bay Village.

As we say ... each apartment is larger and more luxuriously appointed than you would expect at these prices.

If you've ever wanted a place in Oak Bay now is the time to get it before they're all gone.

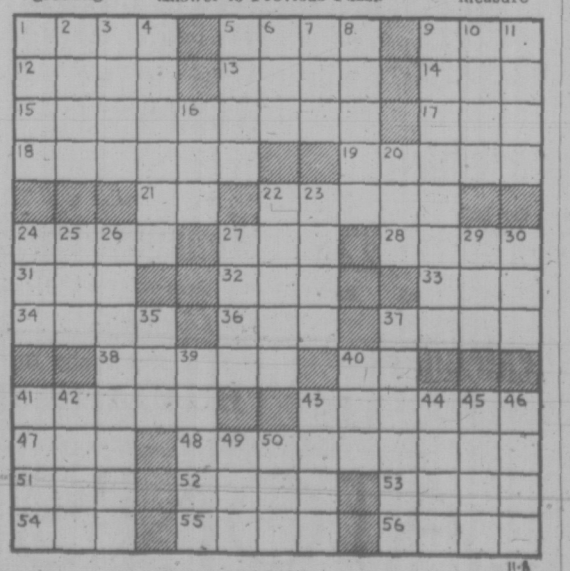
Answer to Previous Puzzle



The Funny Side Of a Crisis . . .

United Press International

British police did their bit today to ease the oil shortage by advising officers to catch a bus to the scene of crimes rather than drive their cars, if possible.

A London newspaper columnist advised would-be bomb makers to start using dynamite instead of molotov cocktails which use gasoline.

A British motorist told an attendant to "fill her up." His tank would take only eight-pence worth of gas.

Europe's fuel problems have had their funnier side and have created a field day for newspaper cartoonists.

The Paris afternoon newspaper France Soir today depicted an Arab holding a gas-pump hose curled in the form of a hoop and Europe jumping through it.

The London Daily Mail showed Britons lining up at a pub and asking the bartender "fill us up—we're not driving."

Another newspaper showed an Arab in a Cadillac whipping past a Briton, chugging along in a small car at 50 miles an hour, the speed recommended for motorists by the British government.

The British government also ordered all government departments and nationalized industries to reduce fuel consumption by 10 per cent, but the navy said one ship would be exempt—the Royal yacht Britannia being used by Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips on their honeymoon.

Tanks suffered in France. The army's armored forces were banned from taking part in the armistice day parade to conserve fuel.

In Belgium, streetcar drivers found that it is not only motorists that hold them up. A street car broke down on carless Sunday in Brussels and backed up 25 other streetcars before it could be moved.

A similar jam lasted for several hours when two streetcars collided in Antwerp.

They could not be cleared because the firm contracted to tow them away had failed to apply for a permit to drive on Sundays.

Lisbon newspapers said 20 persons have been hospitalized with gasoline poisoning after taking too big a gulp while syphoning gasoline. One man was reported to have filled his bathtub with fuel.

Stalled cars have become a common sight in Portugal where gasoline sales are limited to four gallons and stores reported a run on rubber hose and gas cans.

At a news conference in Stockholm on the government's campaign to conserve fuel and electricity, a pretty woman journalist wanted to know whether Swedish authorities would adopt the advice of a Canadian scientist, who said several people should sleep in the same bed and take hot baths together.

"You are welcome," the spokesman replied.

Two-Floor Addition For Courts

Victoria's Advisory Planning Commission recommended Tuesday night that city council approve an application by the provincial government to add two extra floors to the Victoria Law Courts building in the Courtney-Burdett-Blanshard-Quadra block.

Mayor Peter Pollen said today the APC reviewed the application in relation to the stringent height and density requirements of the Cathedral Precinct zone, and found no flaws in the proposal.

He noted the building was constructed with the eventual aim of adding two storeys, as the elevator shows the non-existent floors 4 and 5.

Pollen said the additional accommodation would "finish the building off," and provide much-needed space for judicial purposes including, possibly, offices for the provincial attorney-general's department.

B.C. Artists In Exhibition

Twelve British Columbia artists are represented in an exhibition called Librations now on at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until Dec. 8.

Most of the artists are fro Greater Vancouver, although work by Victoria photographer Nina Raginsky is included.

FLASHING LIGHTS, SIRENS FOR BUSES

TORONTO (CP) — All 1,550 street cars and buses in Toronto will be equipped with flashing lights and sirens to alert police and other possible helpers if a transit operator has an emergency on his vehicle.

The Toronto Transit Commission voted Tuesday to install the devices at a cost of $155,000 despite statements that the benefit may only be psychological.

James Kearns, general-manager of operations, said a study by United States transit officials showed such devices "probably would provide psychological support for the driver but would do little to reduce the number of assaults."

Police officals said the light and sound system will not help apprehend criminals with any real success until the buses are radio-equipped.

But that is at least two years away. In the meantime the system will be installed gradually on new vehicles first.

"If it saves even one life, the money spent will be well worth it," said commissioner Ernest Farrow.

Lazarz Won't Ask For Recount

Central Saanich incumbent alderman Percy Lazarz has admitted defeat to newcomer Earle Tabor in last Saturday's civic election.

Lazarz announced today he will not seek a judicial recount and will likely retire from public life.

Lazarz and Tabor tied with 601 votes. After a recheck returning officer Fred Durrand cast a deciding vote in favor of Tabor.

"I was satisfied that he (Durrand) did a just job," said Lazarz.

After six years on Central Saancih council Lazarz says he is looking forward to some relaxation.

Serving on council is simply offering a "community service," he said, "I never did play politics and I never will."

View Royal Hall Sought

The View Royal Library Board's projects committee has applied for a $17,160 Local Initiatives grant to finance a proposed community centre.

Committee chairman Joy Trail said today a project to change the existing community hall to a full-time activity centre will begin in December if the grant is approved.

A survey of community needs is being conducted in the area by the Malahat South Jaycees and a questionnaire has been mailed to each residence, she said.

The grant would include wages for a manager, project co-ordinator, secretary, painters and carpenters, said Trail, as well as materials needed to make the necessary changes to property around the hall.

Behind the hall is an area which could be cleared and turned into a children's playground, she said.

If the project is successful the library in the basement will be open five days a week and the hall will be used for other daily activities, said Trail.

Many View Royal residents don't even know the library exists, she said, and without adequate funds "it's almost an impossibility" to advertise.

There are no major shopping centres or areas where View Royal residents mingle with one another and a full-time community centre would develop community spirit, she said.

The questionnaires will be picked up by the Jaycees Saturday, Nov. 24, or can be dropped off at the library in the hall on Mondays and Thursdays between 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m., or Wednesday evening.

Cowichan Bay Gets New Floats

New floats will be installed at Cowichan Bay under a $88,380 contract awarded to Greenlees Piledriving Company Limited, the federal public works department announced today.

Floats used by fishing and tourist boats will be replaced by nine-foot wide pontoon floats, about 800 feet long. The new floats will be ready by this April.

A. J. Longmore, Greater Victoria district superintendent of schools, will represent the Canadian Education Association on the Canadian UNESCO commission for a three-year term.

He will serve on the commission's sub-committee for education where he will be involved in developing procedures to implement recommendations of the Faure report, an international report on the needs of education in the world.

Boar in Game

CORNILLON, France (Reuter) — A soccer game between two local teams in this southern French town was halted Sunday when a wild boar charged into the field from a nearby woods, sending the players scurrying for cover.

Autopac Rate Hike Looming

WINNIPEG (CP) — The provincial government is considering increasing Autopac rates next year by 10 to 20 per cent, William Uruski, minister responsible for the public auto insurance corporation, said Tuesday.

He said even with the rate hike, Autopac rates will be "very competitive" with rates of private insurance companies in other provinces.

A hefty surcharge for accident-prone drivers also is being considered, he added.

Under the proposed surcharge, motorists who are more than 50 per cent at fault in more than one accident a year would have to pay an additional premium.

Indians To Fight

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Indians will take up arms if necessary to stop the Alaska pipeline and "make Wounded Knee look like a boy scout picnic," an Indian leader said Tuesday.

Dennis Banks, national executive director of the American Indian Movement, told a news conference the pipeline will damage the habitat of the region, hurting hunting and fishing and cause misery for generations of Alaskan Indians to come.

"The Indian response to the Alaska pipeline running across Indian land will make Wounded Knee look like a boy scout picnic," Banks said.

Injured Eskimo Ready To Try Acupuncture

EDMONTON (CP) — Billy Cooper has a pulled hamstring muscle that threatens to keep him from playing left corner for Edmonton Eskimos in Sunday's Grey Cup football game.

He says acupuncture may be his only hope of getting into action against Ottawa Rough Riders.

"I'm ready to try it. My wife phoned some of the guys in Ottawa to see if their acupuncture man will help me. If the guy is in Toronto for the Grey Cup and it's still up in the air whether I'll be healthy enough to play, I'll ask him to go to work."

Cooper, who played for Ottawa through the first half of the season before moving West, has never met the acupunctrist but says he's seen the results of treatments performed on Riders' Rick Cassata, Jerry Keeling and Rudy Sims.

"Those guys have already been through it and they swear by it. I was in the dressing room the day when Cassata came in after having the first acupuncture treatment. He could hardly move his arm when he left. When he came back he was doing cartwheels in the dressing room.

"He's a bit of a screwball. But so am I."

Cooper, who suffered his injury in the Eskimo's 25-23 victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders in Sunday's Western Football Conference sudden-death final, is looking forward to playing against his old club, but he has no hard feelings.

"Heck, I'm happy for them too. I was never hoping against them. I was hoping for them. I really want to play against them."

Cooper, who played with Ottawa when the Rough Riders won the Grey Cup in 1968 and 1969, asked to be traded "so I could play more."

He arrived in Edmonton two months ago and predicted the Eskimos would make a Grey Cup appearance—their first in 13 years.

"I was traded from Winnipeg to Ottawa and we promptly won two Grey Cups there. I told everybody it was automatic that we were going to the Grey Cup." Cooper also saw Grey Cup duty with the Blue Bombers.

Cooper considers the Eskimos a better club over-all.

"Their offence has been playing over their heads in the last couple of games. The way our defence has come together lately has been a real help. Their defence goes as their front four goes. I think it'll come down to our offence scoring some points on their defence."

Jauch said three players came out of the Saskatchewan game with injuries—Cooper, quarterback Tom Wilkinson with a bruised arm and back and quarterback Bruce Lemmerman with 11 stitches in a gashed elbow. Both quarterbacks are expected to play.

If Cooper can't play, Jauch can turn to Bayne Norrie and Mike Lambros, both eligible to come off the injury list for the game.

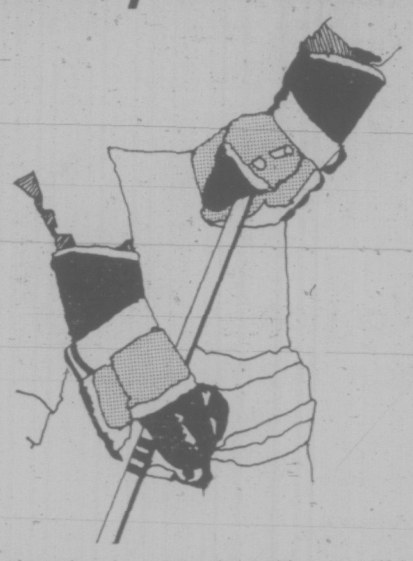
Hockey for Minors



No player is going to stay long with a team if he can't carry the puck without looking at it all the time. Defencemen watch for attackers with their heads down so they can bodycheck them right off the ice.

Only constant practice ca nmake you a good puck-carrier. At first, carry the puck well out in front of you so it's barely in your vision as you look up the ice to where you're headed.

Concentrate on the feel of the puck on your stick, that little bit of weight on the blade. Alternate carrying the puck with skating without it so you can get to know the two different feelings.

It's a good idea to turn the tip of the stick blade slightly inward so the puck won't slide off the end. Carry the puck on the taped part of the blade so you can get a good controlled shot.

Only 8 Riders Back for Cup

OTTAWA (CP) — Of the 32 players who wore the uniform of Ottawa Rough Riders in the 1969 Grey Cup game, only eight will take to the field for Sunday's Canadian Football League championship.

It indicates the recruiting and the work Jack Gotta has done since taking over the coaching job from Frank Clair in 1970.

Among the bigger names missing are those of quarterback Russ Jackson, halfbacks Ron Stewart, flanker Whit Tucker and end Margene Adkins.

The Riders plunged to last place in the Eastern Conference in 1970, were third in 1971 and tied Hamilton for first last year.

Gotta put it all together in 1973 although the Riders had to survive a shaky four-game losing streak at the start of the year to do it.

The players still with the club from the Grey Cup winners of 1969 are Jerry Campbell, Tom Schuette, Roger Perdix, Wayne Giardino, Dan Dever, Wayne Smith, Moe Racine, Doug Collins and Tom Pullen.

Smith, a defensive end, won't be playing Sunday though. He'll be on the sidelines with a broken arm.

The Riders are still hoping quarterback Jerry Keeling will play although the veteran can hardly walk with a leg injury.

Rick Cassata gets the starting quarterback job and Gotta hopes Keeling will be able to come out of the bullpen if needed.

If Keeling is not available, then the backup falls on Jim Foley, the offensive halfback who played quarterback at college.

"But I don't want to even think about that," said Gotta.

Presuming all the Ottawa fans who purchased Grey Cup tickets go to the game, they'll be 4,500 strong at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds Sunday for the 1:30 p.m. EST game.

Wolves Reach Quarters

LONDON (AP) — Wolverhampton Wanderers slammed in three goals in nine minutes Tuesday to overpower Exeter City, a Fourth Division soccer team, 5-1 and reach the quarter-finals of the English League Cup.

Exeter held the First Division club to a 2-1 lead until 17 minutes from the end. Then came the goal rush, including two scored by John Richards.

Ken Hibbitt also contributed two goals to Wolves' victory and Derek Dougan got the other.

The game was the first League Cup game played in the afternoon at the British government's request to save electricity.

In other Cup game, Coventry City beat Stoke City 2-1 and Plymouth Argyle defeated Queen's Park Rangers 3-0.

SHAGGY LOCKS SNARL BOWLERS AT AIRPORT

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Bernie Caterer of Britain and Kambiz Kiani of Iran were ordered to get their hair cut or take the next plane out when they arrived for the world ten-pin bowling championship, which started today.

The two are leading contenders for the title, but they were told they could not enter the country because airport officials ruled that their locks contravened regulations.

However, World Cup officials intervened on their behalf and they were eventually allowed out of the airport.

West Germans Picked to Win

TORONTO (CP) — With most of the 16 berths in the World Cup field, soccer talk these days frequently concerns who will win the 1974 competition in Munich.

And if soccer stars know what they're talking about, host West Germany should become world champions.

Bobby Moore, Jackie Charlton, Jimmy Greaves and Gordon Banks; all English internationals, favor the West Germans. So do Eusebio of Portugal, Jair Da Costa of Brazil and Dragoslav Secularac of Yugoslavia.

They were all here to play in Tuesday night's opening of the World Indoor Football Association League at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"Germany or Brazil, possibly Argentina if they play football," said Charlton, now the manager of Middlesborough of the English second division. "But I can't see anybody beating Germany."

Greaves said: "I favor West Germany without a doubt and not only because they're on their home field. West Germany is just the best team in the world."

"No. 1 is West Germany because they're at home and because they have such a good team" said Eusebio.

Balance Boosts Junior Boxers

London Boxing Club Juniors raced away to a 44-28 halftime lead and then coasted to a 93-73 victory over last-place Merchants in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game Tuesday night at S. J. Willis Junior High School.

A well-balanced attack helped produce the win as five Junior players hit for double figures. Doug Irving and Jim Kupiak each fired 15 points, Steve Rothwell and Mike Morrill had 12 points apiece and Sid Chow chipped in 11 points.

NORWEGIAN SKIER KILLED

SALZBURG (AP) — Sverre Rasmus Bakke, an 18-year-old member of the Norwegian alpine ski team training in Austria for the coming ski season, was killed Monday after a bad fall in a giant slalom run.

Quebec Pro Wins Crown

LAS VEGAS (CP) — Adrien Bigras of Rosemere, Que., shot a 70 Tuesday for a 286 total to win the low pro section of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association club pro tournament.

Bigras's two-under-par total gave him a two-stroke edge over Frank Fowler of Canyon Meadows, Calgary, who shot a 73 Tuesday.

Frank Whibley of Toronto finished with a 73 for a 293 total, three strokes ahead of Stan Leonard and Al Nelson of Vancouver, who shared the lead with Bigras after Monday's round.

First place was worth $2,500.

Tuesday's low round was 67 by Terry Burns of Truro, N.S., who finished far back at 325.

The final day's hard luck story was Dick Silverberg of Victoria. The Glen Meadows pro, who had a pair of 73s and a 76 in his first three rounds, came in with another 73 to finish in a tie with Dave Clayton of Oakville, Ont.

Silverberg was three-under won $575 for their 275 totals.

Silverbetg was three-under par with two holes to play and seemed almost positive of a third-place finish until he took double-bogeys on both of the last two holes to finish with his one-over-par 73.

Cowichan's Bill Wakeham had a final-round 71 but finished out of the money with a 310 total.

Teams captained by Wakeham and Silverberg also failed to qualify for today's final round in the pro-am team competition.

A Quebec team from Kanouraska led the four-round qualifiers with a 2-best-ball total of 502, an amasing 74 under par. The Cowichan team had 554 and Glen Meadows had 543.

Training For Mutes

REDWATER, Alta. (CP) — A rural training centre, designed to help deaf adults find their niche in the community, has been established in this community, 40 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of Fort Edmonton, the project uses mobile homes and trailers for bunk and cook houses on 160 acres of leased land.

Allen MacDonald, chairman of the Kinsmen committee that has researched the project for 18 months, explained that the government provides support for the deaf up to the age of 18.

If the deaf have had help at home, they can go on to higher education. However, if their parents are unable to cope with the problem, "there's really no place for them", said Mr. MacDonald.

The project is designed for 10 men whose education has been slowed by their handicap. They'll be living on the land for the summer, caring for livestock for Edmonton's deaf community.

MARS 'FAR FROM DEAD'

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (Reuter) — Mars is "far from the geologically dead planet" which many scientists have until now believed it to be, a space agency researcher says.

Dr. Raymond Wilson of University of Utah said photographs taken during the two 1969 Mariner Mars probes led many scientists to dismiss the possibility of any life forms on Mars.

But Wilson said closer photographs taken by later Mars probes indicate the planet's geological processes "are quite active."

"In this respect, Mars appears to be more like the earth than the moon," said Wilson, principal investigator of a space agency program aimed at unlocking the planet's secrets and planning for an unmanned Mars landing in 1976.

Although he said the 7,000 high-resolution pictures sent back in the 1971 probe are of good quality, they lack the detail capable of showing the existence of any life forms.

"The Mariner pictures don't answer the question of life on Mars. They show that life is possible but not probable. On Mars we apparently are getting a look at the early stage of geological development."

However, Wilson said the photographs had revealed some surprises including what appeared to be large volcanic mountains, one three times the height of Mount Everest and dried-up riverbeds. They also showed a giant canyon about 2,500 miles long and four miles deep four times the size of Grand Canyon in Arizona.

THEY WANT TO CUT ABORTION RISK

SASKATOON (CP) — University Hospital is one of 10 institutions in Canada participating in a worldwide experiment studying ways to reduce the risk in abortions procured after 12 weeks of pregnancy.

The experiment centres on the use of a solution containing the chemical prostaglandins, instead of a salt solution, to induce premature labor.

"It has been very encouraging so far," said Dr. Tom MacLachlan, head of the hospital's obstetrics and gynecology department. "It has been completely safe except for some cases of nausea and diarrhea which have not been too serious. It is also faster and we expect it would cut down the hospital time for a patient in for an abortion."

Dr. MacLachlan said the main selling point of the new method is that the salt solution carries a high risk and has resulted in some deaths.

"An accident can occur with the best of conditions. There have been no deaths in this hospital, but we have had some patients who have had toxic effects."

Dr. MacLachlan said results of the testing will be compiled by the World Health Organization.

Soviets Very Touchy In Peking Dealings

MALIK

By GEORGE BRIA

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Soviet diplomat made a thrust with an imaginary knife and slowly twisted the blade.

"That," he told a reporter, "is what China is doing to us."

Two years after the vote that gave the People's Republic of China the seat held by Nationalist Taiwan, Peking's presence here is marked largely by fierce warfare with Russia.

"The Chinese see Russians hiding under every table and vice versa," a Western diplomat said.

Top delegates of the rival Communist giants broke up a Security Council meeting on the Mideast war Oct. 23 with an arm-waving and shouting match.

"You should do things with style," Chinese deputy foreign minister Chiao Kuan-hua castigated Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik after order was restored. "I have known you for decades. You have never changed your habits."

And Malik retorted, "If China had given the Arab world as many automatic weapons, rifles, tanks, rockets, planes as the amount of bile it has poured out here in the United Nations Security Council against the Soviet Union, the Arabs would feel some benefit from the help of China."

CHINESE MAKE FRIENDS

The Russians are particularly touchy about Chinese criticism of their Middle East policy. The Chinese accuse them of double-dealing by supporting the Arabs but also helping Israel by allowing Russian Jews to emigrate there. Aside from its running battle with the Soviet Union, the Chinese UN delegation here has scored impressively in its first two years as the champion of undeveloped countries from Asia, African and Latin America.

Delegates from these Third World countries spilled enthusiastically into the aisles of the General Assembly hall to applaud and shake hands with Chiao after his annual policy speech in September.

While hitting hardest at the Russians, the Chinese have not spared the United States. They accuse Moscow and Washington of contending for world dominion and also conspiring together.

Since their arrival in the fall of 1971, the Chinese have become familiar figures in the streets of New York.

LEAVE CHILDREN BEHIND

Some have brought their wives to live in the Chinese mission, a 10-storey former motel on Manhattan's West Side for which they paid a reported $4.85 million. A lack of children there is explained by difficulties in educating a Chinese in a foreign country.

All trace of the Nationalist Chinese who held the UN seat for 26 years is gone except for Nationalist publications which regularly arrive through the mail addressed to UN reporters.

After two years, Chiao told the assembly: "We wish to say frankly that what we have experienced in the United Nations has caused us to become worried. Speeches are multiplying and resolutions piling up."

But if Peking has some unhappiness about the United Nations, Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua has suggested the Russians are even less happy than in the days when they regularly assailed the "Chiang Kai-shek clique."

"Many representatives in the United Nations know how painful it was for the Soviet delegation to see the restoration of the lawful rights of the Peoples Republic of China," Huang told Malik in the Security Council. "Your own people said it was a bitter victory."

AT 13, BRUCE IS A REAL DEEJAY

TORONTO (CP) — A 13-year-old Toronto-area student may be the youngest regular disc jockey in the broadcasting business.

For about six months, Bruce Garrett has been spending Saturday mornings behind turntables and microphones at the University of Toronto campus to produce his own four-hour show on Radio Varsity.

"I was nervous at the audition in May but I'm not nervous now," said the 13-year-old celebrity of his school. "A lot of people phone in and request songs and most people say the show is pretty good."

Providing interviews and commentary is also part of the job that the junior disc jockey says has always interested him. He learned of Radio Varsity from his brother's friends, then "finally got up enough nerve to go in and ask for a job."

Several schoolmates still don't believe he's on the air, the student said. "The kids are always asking me if they can come down to the studio."

But he now has his Radio Varsity press car to show the unconvinced. The experience has also determined his choice of career after school, he said.

"I was thinking of either going into radio or marine mechanics. I'm pretty sure I'll make radio my career now. I've had all this experience."

PRICES UP IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose sharply in the United States last month following September's slow-down, owing partly to the energy crisis and higher prices for fuel oil and gasoline, the government said today.

The labor department reported the cost of living climbed eight-tenths of one per cent in October and pushed consumer prices up 7.9 per cent above a year ago.

It marked the largest jump in any 12-month period since the 8.7-per-cent inflationary rate recorded in the June 1950-51 period at the start of the Korean War.

In addition to sharply higher prices for gasoline and fuel oil, rising costs for clothing, mortgage interest rates and health insurance contributed significantly to the October rise in prices, the government said.

A decline in meat and poultry prices was more than offset in the statistics by large increases in prices of restaurant meals and some food and some grocery store prices.

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Beryl Plumptre of the food prices review board says a survey of the country's food stores confirms suspicions they are neither sufficiently competitive nor concerned about consumers.

Commenting today on a board report recommending a series of consumer-protection measures, Mrs. Plumptre said most devious food-selling practices have been known for years.

"But the report makes very clear just how widespread they are."

The report condenses findings by a group of 80 investigators— Plumptre's posse— during a September survey of pricing practices in 1,689 grocery stores.

It attacks retailers for attempting to trick customers with a variety of "deceiving and confusing" selling methods, including double-ticketing, exaggerated low-price claims and a lack of advertised specials.

Mrs. Plumptre said retailers will be invited to a public meeting here Dec. 10 to comment on the report and explain malpractices uncovered by the investigators.

She added that the report points up an urgent need to provide consumers with better information about buying food; an educational process that should begin in schools.

The government was moving in the direction of tougher consumer protection laws, but a number of areas needed more attention, particularly the relationship among big elements in the food industry.

As it was, the industry was "not sufficiently competitive."

A total of 159 instances indicating possible retail lawbreaking were uncovered during the survey and referred to the consumer affairs department for further action.

Two Montreal food stores have subsequently been charged with misleading advertising; Salaison Joanisse with "illegally advertising foods in such a manner as to create a false impression relative to the quantity and value of the said foods and Royal Butchers with a similar charge.

In the report, the board urges the government to strengthen inspection forces at retail levels, to enforce more strictly and extend misleading advertising legislation, to introduce legislation on deceptive retailing practices, and to "explore" legislation to improve competition among retailers.

It also wants to extend packaging requirements to cut down the number of different size containers, to clarify and more strictly enforce product standards and grading regulations and to work with industry to provide more information food buying.

"For a number of years, consumers have been objecting, individually and through their organizations, to a number of merchandising practices in many food stores which make it difficult for them to be certain they are securing the best value for their food dollar," the report says.

"But authorities have paid little attention to these complaints.

FIRST TANKER ON THURSDAY

The first in a series of oil tankers carrying crude oil from Vancouver to the east coast will pass Victoria Thursday evening.

It is the beginning of a massive export of crude oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca — as large as the inbound movement of crude oil to Cherry Point.

Kenneth Hall, vice-president of Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co., said today eight tankers will carry 1.5 million barrels of oil through the strait in December.

In the same month, three larger tankers will bring an identical 1.5 million barrels of oil past Victoria on the way to the Atlantic Richfield refinery at Cherry Point, near Bellingham.

The difference is the Vancouver exports will come closer to Victoria, moving in Canadian waters.

The first tanker, being loaded at Trans Mountain's Burnaby dock today, is the 30,000-ton Greek tanker, Kimon, which will carry 180,000 barrels.

It is scheduled to leave Vancouver about noon Thursday, passing Victoria about supper time. It will go through the Panama Canal and unload at Portland, Maine, where a pipeline will carry the oil to Montreal.

Hall said eight tankers have already been lined up for the December shipments. The vessels are of Greek, Danish and British registry. The company is seeking additional vessels for January, February and March.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger said today the United States will not shift its Middle East policy because of the Arab oil embargo, and warned that U.S. counter measures may be necessary.

He told a news conference that "It is clear" if the Arab shutdown of oil to the U.S. continues unreasonably and indefinitely, "the United States will have to decile what counter measures are necessary."

However, he said, "we hope it won't come to this." The Nixon administration's hope is that the Arabs will decide that the U.S. is "acting in an even-handed effort to find a just and honorable peace in the Middle East," Kissinger said.

Kissinger said American policy was outlined to the Arab foreign ministers at the United Nations in September and remains constant to this date.

That policy is to "move forward" to the beginning of negotiations that will bring "a just and lasting peace."

Kissinger's announcement came as most eminent economists called on their country Tuesday to resist Arab oil blackmail and consider counter-measures against countries "committing hostile acts of embargo."

The statement issued in Cambridge, Mass., was the most forceful declaration to date about the worsening oil situation from a group outside government and business circles.

"If united, the (consuming nations) can refuse to supply food and manufactured goods to the nations committing the hostile acts of embargo," the economists stated.

"The Soviet Union might find it difficult to make up the deficit and the Arabs might well be unwilling to accept the resulting dependence."

The reference to a counter-boycott had the effect of a nudge to the Nixon administration, which has indicated extreme reluctance to consider such steps.

However, Tuesday night a top state department official said economic blackmail would work both ways.

The official, State Undersecretary William Porter, did not specifically threaten retaliation but noted that the U.S. produces much of the world's food and industrial goods.

Porter, in a speech in Bowling Green, Ky., said:

"In a world which may well see growing shortages of a variety of commodities, economic blackmail in any form

LEWIS WILLING TO FORCE VOTE

Times News Services

The New Democratic Party could fight a winter election on the energy issue and score points with the voters, federal leader David Lewis claimed Tuesday.

"We'd do well ... It's an issue which is ours," he told reporters in Ottawa after dropping a veiled threat to dump the minority Liberal government if it lets the voluntary national price freeze on petroleum products end Jan. 30 as scheduled.

He said more voters than ever before are accepting the general NDP view that energy resources must be "treated like a public utility" and removed from the control of large multi-national corporations.

There is "much to distinguish" NDP energy policies from those of the Liberal and Conservative parties — including divergent views on tax laws affecting resource industries, he said.

In particular, he said, a federally-operated national petroleum corporation should be established to take charge of all oil buying — of both domestic and foreign crude.

The corporation also should become involved in every segment of the petroleum industry from production to distribution, giving the public an effective voice in the industry.

Only if major policy shifts are made will the public have the protection it should in a time of ever-rising energy costs and uncertain supplies, he said.

He made his comments after being told in the Commons by Prime Minister Trudeau that the government has no plans to let the price freeze run longer than the five-month period set when it began Sept. 4.

The NDP leader said he will take the toughest possible stand on this question, possibly voting against the government.

"It could include that. I don't say it will include it, but it could."

He called energy a critical issue and said it is "certainly one on which the government might fall." But he refused to be pinned down, saying it would be "a stupid decision" to make at this stage.

The company has asked the federal government for permission for a price increase of 4.5 cents a gallon on all products from its Montreal refinery, with an increase of 3.9 cents a gallon on gasoline and fuel oils produced in the Atlantic provinces.

The increases are sought to offset higher costs of imported crude from Iran, Venezuela and West Africa that became effective Oct. 15 and Nov. 1, the company said.

Shell Canada Ltd. of Toronto applied earlier this month for approval to raise its gasoline prices by 5.1 cents a gallon east of the Ottawa Valley and to raise fuel prices by 4.5 cents a gallon.

Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto is seeking an increase of 4.8 cents a gallon for gasoline in the same areas and 4.3 cents a gallon for home heating oil.

And in Toronto, provincial Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said Tuesday that Ontario would ration gasoline before banning Sunday driving.

McKeough, however, emphasized that energy supplies are not yet low enough to warrant rationing.

He said it would be extremely difficult to "legitimize" who could drive on Sunday and who couldn't.

Soviet A-Arms Said In Egypt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union probably shipped nuclear weapons into Egypt during the October war, U.S. officials now believe.

These weapons are still believed to be in Egypt, though undoubedly under strict Russian control.

They are thought to be atomic warheads for mobile Soviet-built "Scud" missiles, also shipped to Egypt at some point either before or during the fighting.

The missiles have a range estimated at between 160 to 180 miles, far enough to bring Israeli cities with their reach if launched from northeastern sectors of Egypt.

Intelligence sources say, however, that this vessel and possibly some others also showed signs of still having some nuclear material aboard when they left port.

Officials decone to discuss the details of whether measuring devices can detect whether some material was unloaded from the ships, or whether there is other evidence to support the view that

Nixon Warning Ignored

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski says the White House has warned him that part of his investigation is treading on national security secrets, but he is pursuing the case anyway.

In testimony before the Senate judiciary committee Tuesday, Jaworski indicated he may be near the point of requesting a grand jury indictment and he is growing impatient over White House delays in giving him information.

Jaworski said President Nixon's chief of staff, Alexander Haig, invited him to the White House last week and told him a case in which an indictment was imminent involved a matter of grave national security.

Jaworski would not identify case, except to say it was related to the break-in ordered by the White House "plumbers" at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

LAWSON
. . . taking sides

I Was Deceived: Lawson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamsters union leader Ed Lawson said Tuesday British Columbia Health Minister Dennis Cocke "knowingly deceived me" on the Minister's stand in the California grape dispute.

Lawson, international vice-president of the Teamsters, said the provincial government was "clearly taking sides" in what was essentially a dispute between two rival unions and said the issue may cause his union to reassess its position of support for the NDP government.

Lawson made the charges at a press conference, at which he said Cocke "was not telling the truth."

The charges arose from telephone calls between the minister and the Teamsters leader and an interview of Cocke on the CBC.

The dispute over the California grapes is between the Teamsters and Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, with the B.C. Federation of Labor backing the farm workers and ordering a boycott of California grapes.

Last week, Cocke said institutions under his control, such as hospitals, wouldn't be buying California grapes.

Lawson said he phoned Cocke and was assured the boycott applied only to non-union grapes.

Cocke, according to Lawson, said during the CBC interview, the boycott applied to all California grapes.

JUST HOW WELL DID AGENCIES PERFORM?

In the early-morning hours of Oct. 25, teletypes in newspapers, radio and TV stations began chattering out the news that the United States had ordered its armed forces on a world-wide alert as a result of developments in the Middle East war.

Readers and listeners, anxious to know how serious the situation was, were dependent primarily on the three major news-gathering services — Associated Press, Reuters and United Press International. For an analysis of how well the three performed see Page 6 in today's Times.

Greek Roundup Continues

Times News Services

ATHENS — Greek military authorities cracked down today on opposition politicians, students, Communists and other suspected participants in the three-day anti-government rebellion that returned martial law to Greece.

Troops backed by tanks and armored personnel carriers continued to guard the parliament building and Athens university. The army still occupied the Zappeion national garden.

The city was quiet for the third consecutive day since the uprising that left 12 persons dead and about 150 injured and police continued rounding up suspects.

The Greek government also today dissolved 29 student associations and confiscated their property.

All universities in Greece already had been ordered closed until Dec. 16 in a move to weaken student power, and three politicians, foes of the regime, were placed under house arrest Tuesday night.

Martial law provisions suspend several articles of the constitution dealing with civil liberties and human rights and this has been coupled with press censorship.

A government communique said only that Peron, 78, was recovering from a relapse of a bronchial ailment he suffered last week.

But other sources said the communique was issued to avoid spreading alarm about the health of Peron, who returned to power in Argentina earlier this year.

prices the significance of these practices has become much greater."

The report says the survey found that average prices were higher as distance increased from central distribution centres; coastal province prices were higher than in central provinces, costs in Northern regions were higher than those in more populated areas and big city prices generally were lower than those in small communities and rural areas.

While transportation was given as the main cause of the price difference, the "survey found indications of other factors tending to reduce competition."

The board says such things as concentration of ownership in some regions and "zone pricing systems" related to the degree of competition in others would be further examined.

IGNORE POLICY

The report criticizes a number of food firms which agreed last August to let consumers pay the lowest price when two or more prices were marked on an item.

"In many cases, this agreement is not being implemented by store managers," the report says.

Test purchases made by the investigators usually proved to cost the higher price in cases where products carried more than one label.

The report said five retailers—Dominion Stores, Food City, IGA, Canada Safeway and Woodwards—agreed in August not to raise the price of any food item on the shelf on which the price already was marked.

"The survey found that in no organization was this agreement being fully implemented."

DISPLAYS DECEPTIVE

The report also attacks grocery stores for using end-aisle displays to "confuse and deceive" consumers.

Prices of displayed items often were the same as those on the shelf or actually higher and in some cases cashiers charged the higher price if a customer picked the item off the shelf rather than from the display.

The report also criticizes the use of red lights over meat counters to make meat look more appealing and of using signs that say "special" for items at regular prices.

"The difference in regular price levels between competing chains and competing stores are not sufficient to justify the generally advertised claims."

The board said it would be prepared to hold public hearings to give food retailers a chance to reply to the various criticisms.

Youths Charged In Theft

Two youths were remanded in custody after appearing in Victoria provincial court today charged with breaking, entering and theft of tools from a construction shed in Colwood early this morning.

Judge William Ostler remanded Steven Knight, 17, and Roger Gerald Lessard, 18, both of no fixed address, to Friday at the request of Prosecutor Peter Birkett.

Two youths were arrested shortly after as they sat in a car near the scene.

with any commodity will be a two-edged sword — hurting those who wield it as well as intended victims."

The economists who supported consideration of countermeasures included four Nobel Prize winners: Kenneth J. Arrow, Simon Kuznets and Wassily Leontief, all of Harvard, and Paul Samuelson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the other three were Kenneth Galbraith, of Harvard, now president of the American economic Association, and Yale's Merton Peck and MIT's Franklin Fisher.

Another economist, Robert Solow, of MIT, signed the statement but dissented on the counter-boycott.

The economists agreed that the reduction in total Arab oil production, which they estimated at 25 per cent, is "genuinely damaging" to the consuming nations, though the United States is harmed least of all.

They said that because of the shortage of domestic refining capacity, fuel oil would be scarce even if plenty of crude oil was available.

The main impact domestically, they said, will be in east coast industry which is about 85 per cent dependent on imported supplies.

Concerning the Arab embargo, the economists stated:

"We warn that letting our policies be determined or even influenced by the threat of injury is as futile as it is ignoble. Oil is a non-durable good. If to maintain this flow we acceded to a course of action we do not otherwise desire, then it will follow as the night the day that we will be blackmailed again and again."

They indicated that an uncompromising U.S. stand would help U.S. allies, for the Arabs would realize then that they are "tormenting Europe and Asia to no purpose."

They added that the consuming nations are "not without weapons of their own."

"It would be more productive for (them) to confer on such counter-measures than to outdo each other in subservience which profits them nothing," they wrote.

The economists' statement was at sharp odds with the privately expressed views of top U.S. oil company executives.

Some of them told President Nixon as early as 1969 that America's policy toward Israel conflicted with the country's energy needs.

The executives favor a more conciliatory policy toward the Arab nations.

They fear retaliation by the United States might be met with nationalization of their assets in the Middle East.

One of the Harvard economists who signed the statement issued in Cambridge, Wassily Leontief, charged at a news conference that the oil companies "miscalculated willingly or unwillingly the growth of demand.

"The oil shortage is not simply the result of the Arab oil embargo, but also of gross mismanagement on the part of our private oil industry abetted by our national government," he said.

Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, meanwhile, said the eastern part of the United States may be heading for electrical power brownouts by December or January because of the fuel crisis.

A deputy assistant secretary of interior, Eric Zausner, said an onrushing shortage of residual oil will leave many power plants so short of fuel, especially on the east coast, that consumption of electrical power must be reduced 10 to 20 per cent.

Morton also told a news conference that shortages of residual oil will begin hurting, particularly in power plants, by early December.

Shortage of disillate oils — primarily home heating oil and diesel and jet fuel — will hit late in January and gasoline shortages may begin showing up in early or mid-February, Morton said.

One of Nixon's top aides said the president is giving no thought to banning automobile driving on Sunday.

Roy Ash, director of the office of management and budget ruled out consideration of any Sunday ban on driving, but said Nixon is considering proposals to prohibit the sale of gasoline on Sunday.

In Bismarck, N.D. Gov. Arthur Link today proclaimed North Dakota a disaster emergency area and issued executive orders aimed at implementing energy conservation programs in the state.

Christmas Trees Boosted in Price

Christmas trees have gone the way of most other commodities and will be more expensive this year.

Wholesalers estimated today that trees will cost between 5 and 10 per cent more this year.

J. G. McCully, a Vancouver wholesaler, said the higher cost of labor was the major reason for the increase.

. . . Soviet A-Arm Mystery

the wardheads are in fact in Egypt.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today there is no doubt the United States will pressure Israel to make concessions to Egypt over the withdrawal of forces on the Suez front.

The question is expected to reach a showdown Thursday when Israeli and Egyptian senior officers hold their sixth meeting on the Cairo-Suez road.

Egypt said today Israel's refusal to withdraw to the Oct. 22 ceasefire line jeopordized the chances of peace.

Even as the government mapped out its strategy for the withdrawal negotiations, the army radio reported Syrian artillery fire in the Mizrat Beit Jihan area on the Syrian front.

Israeli units returned fire, but no casualities were reported, the broadcast said.

At the United Nations, a Soviet spokesman Tuesday accused China of warmongering in the Middle East and at the same time appealed to Peking to help pay for the peacekeeping force.

China and its European ally, Albania, have called the force illegal and reiterated Tuesday night they will not participate in its financing.

Soviet envoy Vasily Sarfronchuk accused China of "doing everything to impede the ceasefire and create conditions that would deepen and ignite an even broader war in the Middle East. . . ."

In reply, Chinese delegate Wang Wei-tsai said: "The Arab and Palestine people have launched a just war against Israeli aggression and you're doing your best to stamp it out whiles. . . trying to curry favor with the monopoly capitalists. . . ."

Sharp Waited

Canadian officials were pleased when Sharp was invited to the Kosygin meeting after he arrived in Moscow Sunday night, welcoming it as a sign of good relations with the Soviet government.

But Sharp was kept waiting more than two hours today before Kosygin was ready to see him.

Sharp said trade would likely be the major topic in the meeting.

Artists at Work Draw 8,000

Eight thousand people, including hundreds of children, attended the recent three-and-a-half day Artists at Work demonstration at Victoria Art Gallery.

Queues stretched out into the street and the Women's Committee which organized the event were under pressure in coping with the unexpected influx.

Attendance for this third annual show was double last year.

Alert Now Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has cancelled the six-week-old military alert for the 60 ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea, the Pentagon said Monday.

FRIENDS AGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — The communications breakdown between Ottawa and Alberta over energy issues has been resolved, a spokesman for Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said today.

"It was a very good meeting; relations have picked up and the minister was very pleased with the outcome."

The spokesman said Macdonald also will meet Alberta officials Friday in Toronto during a federal-provincial meeting of energy ministers.

A Supreme Court Bench Un-Warmed by Woman

I'm pleased to give most of this space today to a very good letter from Norrie Preston who is vice-president of the Victoria Status of Women Action Group.

Ms. Preston writes in response to a facitious coment here on the granting of full rights to women who may wish to work underground in mines, legislation which, as I noted, seemed to be taken by the women's liberation movement as something short of a victory.

Since Norrie comments in her letter on my attitude to the struggle for women's rights I just want to reiterate my views.

For many years I've been writing against legislation and unwritten pressures that discriminate against women. I believe that much remains to be done. But I also believe very strongly that it is not so much the male attitude now that holds back women as the female attitude, that such groups as the Victoria Status of Women should be concentrating on the education of women more than the education of men.

How can we take seriously the suggestion that there should be women as Supreme Court judges or school inspectors when women generally are failing miserably to live up to the most basic responsibilities?

In their fundamental role as consumers they've allowed themselves to become gypped by gimmicks and contests and merchandising tricks at the expense of quality and price. In the world of day-time television and day-time radio they have shown an appetite for tasteless garbage. In life generally, in far too many cases, they have become disgruntled, passive and resentful.

With that reservation, I offer Norrie's letter as an articulate view of a position with which I agree.

Dear Jack:

I am afraid your hang-ups about women are showing! If you are indeed waiting breathlessly for our celebration with marches and fireworks then you are going to turn blue.

The facts in this matter are that:

The Provincial Civil Service Commission advertises one job for men, another for women at a lower pay;

Only 1.3 per cent of the Civil Service Administration are women;

Only one woman is a principal out of 54 school principals in the Victoria School District;

Only one woman is a school inspector in all of British Columbia;

Only 10 per cent of doctors are women, but nearly 100 per cent of nurses are women;

Only 3.9 per cent of all managerial positions are held by women;

Women earn only 20 per cent of all earned income in Canada although they make up 35.3 per cent of the total labor force;

And women make up two-thirds of the nation's poor people.

The celebration will take place when there is some indication that there is equality of opportunity.

You should also be aware that:

Indian women are deprived in the same circumstances in which their male counterparts are privileged;

No woman has ever sat on the Supreme Court of Canada;

Only eight of 102 seats in the Senate are appointed to women at this time;

Only 24 women have been elected to Parliament since 1921 when they received the franchise;

Only one woman in all the Federal Civil Service has the status of deputy minister.

The jubilant march will take place when women actually have freedom of choice. As for the fireworks, I will personally let off one large roman candle when people like you, Jack, stop the snickering. I think that you are a person who would go along with the principle that "there should be equality of opportunity to share the responsibilities of society as well as its privileges."

Business Boom From the Sea

Business bonanza is being enjoyed by local merchants through the annual refit of the P and O line's 120-foot luxury liner Arcadia in the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

Some 360 restaurant chairs — acting head waiter Peter Norris is seen at jettyside with a portion of them — are being recovered by Gregg's Upholstery. An additional 250 pieces of furniture are also being upholstered.

Donald Flooring Installations Ltd. are recarpeting 100 of the cabins and repairing carpet in the public areas of the ship.

Nu-Way Cleaners have the job of cleaning all cabin furnishings and Carpetorium Ltd. are cleaning all the carpets and loose upholstery.

The line's hotel services manager Albert J. Booth was in Victoria in September to size up local capabilities and decided Victoria would be ideal as the first spot Arcadia has had her annual refit outside her home port of Southampton.

ISHERWOODS FACE CHARGE

Former Saanich alderman and city lawyer Foster Isherwood has been charged jointly with three members of his family with violating an order of the B.C. pollution control board by allowing effluent to discharge on property at the Royal Oak Motel, 4676 Elk Lake.

The charge, sworn Nov. 8, was read in Victoria provincial court this morning.

Also named are Joseph Clayton Isherwood, George B. Isherwood and John C. Isherwood co-owners of the motel.

Fire Inspectors Checking Centre

Fire inspectors were scheduled to visit the Open Space arts centre on lower Fort Street this afternoon and if the centre passes muster, the show will go on tonight.

Director Gene Miller said today he had been expecting the inspection Tuesday but the delay was a question of co-ordinating the visit of more than one inspector.

Open Space has been closed to the public for almost three weeks for a variety of structural and equipment modifications after a council committee told him it would no longer tolerate a potential fire hazard in the community.

If the centre passes inspection, Miller said Contemp-Arts will open tonight with Chuck Santon's Small Accumulation of Events, an environmental arts display.

The festival is scheduled to continue through Dec. 2 with music, dance, film, poetry and visual arts.

Major Role Forecast For Core Committee

As the mayors-elect of both Saanich and Oak Bay will not be serving on the Capital Regional Board, the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee will play a more important role as a common meeting ground for civic heads of the four core municipalities.

That prediction came from Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen today, when he told reporters he had already held preliminary discussions with Saanich Mayor-elect Ed Lum and Oak Bay Mayor-elect Brian Smith on using the committee as "a more effective co-ordinating vehicle in the four core municipalities."

Pollen said he regarded it as a "minor tragedy" that neither Lum nor Smith would be on the regional board, adding: "We must have some committee within which they can express their point of view on the total area."

He said they had both expressed "positive and enthusiastic" support for such intermunicipal co-operation, which should not be construed in any way as indicating they advocated amalgamation.

Smith had made it only too clear, before and after the election, that he wanted "no truck or trade as far as amalgamation is concerned," Pollen said.

The Victoria mayor has said on a number of recent occasions he would like to see the Intermunicipal Committee tackle such problems as bylaw rationalization in the Greater Victoria area and the co-ordination of recreation planning.

He has also said he would like to see area-wide collective bargaining, but noted today the proposal has received little or no support.

Pollen said he is more than ever convinced there must be "some rationalization of the governmental process in this area."

"If it is necessary to have amalgamation to achieve that I would strongly support it," he said.

If the four core municipalities were to amalgamate the combined population would be only just over 150,000, he said, "so it's not as if you'd be amalgamating some kind of monster."

Lum was quoted as saying before the election he considers amalgamation "inevitable," but Smith has repeatedly expressed his strong opposition to the idea, saying the voter would lose contact with his elected representatives in a bureaucratic colossus.

Pollen Backing Off In Reid Centre Fight

Just one week after he told city businessmen he would do everything in his power to kill the Reid Centre project, Mayor Peter Pollen said today he is not convinced that a continued legal fight would "serve any useful purpose."

He told reporters at his weekly press conference he had revised his thinking somewhat after talking to "some of the more learned members of city council."

A week ago today, at a mayoralty candidates' press conference staged by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Pollen said: "I am doing everything I legally can to impede the project."

Why the apparent change of mind?

Pollen denied he had altered his stance confronted with indications that fellow council members regarded the Reid development as fait accompli.

But he admitted the fact that several aldermen turned out for the recent sod-turning ceremony on the Wharf Street site "didn't give me any great rousing feeling of solidarity."

"They were obviously enticed into the spiders' web by a fellow singing a very good lullaby," he commented, adding that Reid himself was fully adorned in "his promotional attire complete with dark glasses and colorful tie."

Pollen said he considered it "a rather foolish move to participate in this ludicrous spectacle."

And he added: "I obviously haven't received any encouragement or endorsation by my fellow members of council."

Following a recent B.C. Supreme Court ruling that Reid's land-use contract with the city was valid, despite doubts to the contrary caused by Reid's failure to meet certain time specifications, Pollen indicated he would urge city council to appeal the decision.

Today he would only explain his attitude by saying: "I am not convinced an appeal would be useless. But on the other hand I'm not convinced it would serve any useful purpose . . . to go through a bunch of manoeuvres without any clearly defined objective."

Timing Off But Scouts Really Earned an 'A'

JOHN

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The theory behind the test is to prove a Scout's capability of surviving in the wilderness.

The usual journey takes about two days.

This weekend two 14-year-olds from Victoria passed the test with flying colors.

Kevin Higgins and John Whelen were at the "pathfinder stage" in their Scout development when they set out on a trek by map and compass to the old ski chalet at Silver Lake near Mount Brenton, just west of Ladysmith.

Planning for the trip, which fulfills the "first class" Scout journey requirement, was long and in depth.

The boys predicted they could hike the eight miles through logging country on Saturday, stay overnight at the cabin and back-track to a pre-arranged rendezvous point on a highway near Ladysmith.

They were scheduled to come out of the woods Sunday at 4:30 p.m. Fifth Gary Oak Troop leader Brian Johnston was there to meet them . . . but the boys didn't show.

Police were notified and at dawn the next day both boys' parents found themselves at the Ladysmith RCMP headquarters awaiting the results of a massive search and rescue program by helicopter, tracking dogs and trail.

Mrs. Edward Whelen, 2631 Margate, John's mother, said she reads whenever she's "really concerned about something." Monday she was reading and "didn't remember a word I read."

The search terminated about noon Monday, however, when both boys appeared at the pre-arranged rendezvous, almost 24 hours late.

"The snow was so thick we had to crawl along," explained John. "When it got dark Saturday, we were so wet and cold we decided to set up camp, though there was no sign of the cabin."

He said a mineral field near Mount Brenton had thrown the compass direction off — "it kept pointing due east."

Also contributing to the time-lag in their journey was "an incredible amount of snow, and new logging roads not yet shown on an area map" the boys were using.

"I guess we had gone about eight miles Saturday but somewhere we got off the track."

"Okay on food," they curled up in sleeping bags for the night and in the morning found the chalet about a half-mile away.

The real problem surfaced then.

"We were lost and didn't know just where to proceed to the next day. Unfortunately we were misguided," said John, explaining they continued down a ravine as the snow continued. "We were right at the bottom, and there was no way a search party could have found us there.

"A couple of times we were going so slow we thought it would take days to get out," but the pair followed a river and with compass back to normal they happened on a logging road which led them to the meeting place.

"It was rather funny," said John, wrapping up the tale, "when we phoned home, we were told everpbody was out looking for us."

"I guess we went about 20 miles — now all that's left is to do a report and then we find out if we passed."

The pathfinder stage, they explained, was designed to "prove we could survive in the wilderness."

New Source Arises For Heroin Imports

The French connection has been replaced by the Hong Kong connection, Camosun College students were told Tuesday.

Heroin that used to reach Vancouver Island from Turkey via Marseilles, France, is now coming from Southeast Asia via Hong Kong, said S-Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria RCMP drug squad.

"We're getting very high quality Oriental heroin reaching this country from Hong Kong," Staples said.

Underground laboratories there are producing heroin that is 85 to 90 per cent pure, made from opium poppies grown in the "Golden Triangle," and area of Burma, Laos and Thailand, he said.

Staples said Mexican heroin is also turning up on the Island.

Traffic in heroin is now a $150-million-a-year business in British Columbia, with profits rivalling MacMillan Bloedel, he said.

The market for the drug continues to grow, he said.

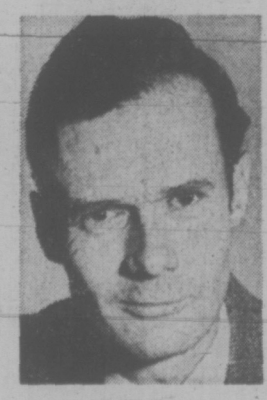
By 1971 that number had increased to 150, and in 1972 to 400-plus addicts, Staples said.

On Vancouver Island in 1972 there were 1,244 heroin addicts known to police, he said, and that number is "certainly more than 1,500 by now."

"Perhaps there are more than double that," said Staples.



STAPLES
. . . Hong Kong connection

Yet in 1965 only one Canadian city — Vancouver — had any heroin problem, he said. There were 600 known addicts in the city then, all in the 100-block East Hastings area.

By comparison, Montreal had 12 known addicts in 1965, Staples said.

A typical Victoria addict is between 17 and 24 years old, he said, and supports a three to four heroin capsule a day habit. A year and a half ago the average habit was one-quarter capsule a day.

Staples said one heroin capsule now costs $35 to $45. Last year at this time it cost $20.

The drug is brought to Vancouver from Hong Kong by a courier or "mule" who has ben hired by the man financing the operation, he said.

It is hidden in the false bottom of luggage, taped to the courier's body, or imported in many other ways.

The courier gives the heroin to the "back end man" who cuts it three or four times to dilute it. Right now heroin on the street is 32 per cent pure, he said.

Staples said the back end man then lays down caches of heroin around the city — at the base of telephone poles or stop signs, or at the corner of a garage.

He gives the addresses of these caches to a "front end man", said Staples, and this man sells the addresses to a group of middlemen.

The middleman splits his cache into smaller bundles, lays them down at various places, and sells the addresses to street pushers, he said.

Middlemen and pushers are usually so dependent on heroin themselves they aren't making much money, he added.

Another drug causing problems in the Victoria area is a synthetic drug called MDA, said Staples.

"This drug has caused almost more overdose cases than heroin in this area at least," he said.

It is being manufactured in the area in large quantities, he said. There is no quality control, and one by-product can be strychnine, which is highly poisonous.

'Potential Hazard' in Logs

A manufactured fireplace log, marketed in Victoria stores complete with a long list of directions, is potentially hazardous, the B.C. Fire Marshal's office said Tuesday.

"Duraflame logs are a potential hazard if not used according to instructions clearly marked," says a bulletin issued to all fire departments in the province.

Acting on complaints from consumers in Vancouver — one critic said the log had started a chimney fire — the office asks that the five rules listed under the word "Caution" on the Duraflame packages be adhered to.

1—Do not burn in a sheet metal fireplace, pot-bellied stove or barbecue.

2—Never attempt to move or break up log after lighting — use of fire tong or poker could be hazardous.

3—Never add Duraflame to existing fire.

4—Do not use for cooking.

5—In emergency douse flames with sand, water or chemical fire extinguisher.

One Duraflame log, said Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates, puts out a total of 25,000 BTUs per hour and "that's a lot of heat."

"From the common sense point of view the logs should be properly used and properly secured if in a grate so there's no chance of it rolling out and breaking up."

He said the department of consumer affairs had investigated the product for possible listing on a hazardous products inventory, but instead asked that the producing company — Stockton Duraflame Inc., Stockton, Calif. — make directions more explicit.

The heat content also was reduced, before market sale. What was formerly a 90,000-BTU three-hour log is now a two-hour log.

Duraflame logs are composed of cedar sawdust, wax and a special coloring agent, the package says.

PRICES UP IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose sharply in the United States last month following September's slow-down, owing partly to the energy crisis and higher prices for fuel oil and gasoline, the government said today.

The labor department reported the cost of living climbed eight-tenths of one per cent in October and pushed consumer prices up 7.9 per cent above a year ago.

It marked the largest jump in any 12-month period since the 8.7-per-cent inflationary rate recorded in the June 1950-51 period at the start of the Korean War.

In addition to sharply higher prices for gasoline and fuel oil, rising costs for clothing, mortgage interest rates and health insurance contributed significantly to the October rise in prices, the government said.

A decline in meat and poultry prices was more than offset in the statistics by large increases in prices of restaurant meals and some food and some grocery store prices.

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Beryl Plumptre of the food prices review board says a survey of the country's food stores confirms suspicions they are neither sufficiently competitive nor concerned about consumers.

Commenting today on a board report recommending a series of consumer-protection measures, Mrs. Plumptre said most devious food-selling practices have been known for years.

"But the report makes very clear just how widespread they are."

The report condenses findings by a group of 80 investigators — Plumptre's posse — during a September survey of pricing practices in 1,689 grocery stores.

It attacks retailers for attempting to trick customers with a variety of "deceiving and confusing" selling methods, including double-ticketing, exaggerated low-price claims and a lack of advertised specials.

Mrs. Plumptre said retailers will be invited to a public meeting here Dec. 10 to comment on the report and explain malpractices uncovered by the investigators.

She added that the report points up an urgent need to provide consumers with better information about buying food; an educational process that should begin in schools.

The government was moving in the direction of tougher consumer protection laws, but a number of areas needed more attention, particularly the relationship among big elements in the food industry.

As it was, the industry was "not sufficiently competitive."

A total of 159 instances indicating possible retail lawbreaking were uncovered during the survey and referred to the consumer affairs department for further action.

Two Montreal food stores have subsequently been charged with misleading advertising: Salaison Joanisse with "illegally advertising foods in such a manner as to create a false impression relative to the quantity and value of the said foods and Royal Butchers with a similar charge.

In the report, the board urges the government to strengthen inspection forces at retail levels, to enforce more strictly and extend misleading advertising legislation, to introduce legislation on deceptive retailing practices, and to "explore" legislation to improve competition among retailers.

It also wants to extend packaging requirements to cut down the number of different size containers, to clarify and more strictly enforce product standards and grading regulations and to work with industry to provide more information food buying.

"For a number of years, consumers have been objecting, individually and through their organizations, to a number of merchandising practices in many food stores which make it difficult for them to be certain they are securing the best value for their food dollar," the report says.

"But authorities have paid little attention to these complaints.

FIRST TANKER ON THURSDAY

The first in a series of oil tankers carrying crude oil from Vancouver to the east coast will pass Victoria Thursday evening.

It is the beginning of a massive export of crude oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca — as large as the inbound movement of crude oil to Cherry Point.

Kenneth Hall, vice-president of Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co., said today eight tankers will carry 1.5 million barrels of oil through the strait in December.

In the same month, three larger tankers will bring an identical 1.5 million barrels of oil past Victoria on the way to the Atlantic Richfield refinery at Cherry Point, near Bellingham.

The difference is the Vancouver exports will come closer to Victoria, moving in Canadian waters.

The first tanker, being loaded at Trans Mountain's Burnaby dock today, is the 30,000-ton Greek tanker, Kimon, which will carry 180,000 barrels.

It is scheduled to leave Vancouver about noon Thursday, passing Victoria about supper time. It will go through the Panama Canal and unload at Portland, Maine, where a pipeline will carry the oil to Montreal.

Hall said eight tankers have already been lined up for the December shipments. The vessels are of Greek, Danish and British registry. The company is seeking additional vessels for January, February and March.

Kissinger Warns Of U.S. Retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger said today the United States will not shift its Middle East policy because of the Arab oil embargo, and warned that U.S. counter measures may be necessary.

He told a news conference that "It is clear" if the Arab shutdown of oil to the U.S. continues unreasonably and indefinitely, "the United States will have to decide what counter measures are necessary."

However, he said, "we hope it won't come to this." The Nixon administration's hope is that the Arabs will decide that the U.S. is "acting in an even-handed effort to find a just and honorable peace in the Middle East," Kissinger said.

Kissinger said American policy was outlined to the Arab foreign ministers at the United Nations in September and remains constant to this date.

That policy is to "move forward" to the beginning of negotiations that will bring "a just and lasting peace."

Kissinger's announcement came as most eminent economists called on their country Tuesday to resist Arab oil blackmail and consider counter-measures against countries "committing hostile acts of embargo."

The statement issued in Cambridge, Mass., was the most forceful declaration to date about the worsening oil situation from a group outside government and business circles.

"If united, the (consuming nations) can refuse to supply food and manufactured goods to the nations committing the hostile acts of embargo," the economists stated.

"The Soviet Union might find it difficult to make up the deficit and the Arabs might well be unwilling to accept the resulting dependence."

The reference to a counter-boycott had the effect of a nudge to the Nixon administration, which has indicated extreme reluctance to consider such steps.

However Tuesday night a top state department official said economic blackmail would work both ways.

The official, State Undersecretary William Porter, did not specifically threaten retaliation but noted that the U.S. produces much of the world's food and industrial goods.

Porter, in a speech in Bowling Green, Ky., said:

"In a world which may well see growing shortages of a variety of commodities, economic blackmail in any form

LEWIS WILLING TO FORCE VOTE

Times News Services

The New Democratic Party could fight a winter election on the energy issue and score points with the voters, federal leader David Lewis claimed Tuesday.

"We'd do well ... It's an issue which is ours," he told reporters in Ottawa after dropping a veiled threat to dump the minority Liberal government if it lets the voluntary national price freeze on petroleum products end Jan. 30 as scheduled.

He said more voters than ever before are accepting the general NDP view that energy resources must be "treated like a public utility" and removed from the control of large multi-national corporations.

There is "much to distinguish" NDP energy policies from those of the Liberal and Conservative parties — including divergent views on tax laws affecting resource industries, he said.

In particular, he said, a federally-operated national petroleum corporation should be established to take charge of all oil buying — of both domestic and foreign crude.

The corporation also should become involved in every segment of the petroleum industry from production to distribution, giving the public an effective voice in the industry.

Only if major policy shifts are made will the public have the protection it should in a time of ever-rising energy costs and uncertain supplies, he said.

He made his comments after being told in the Commons by Prime Minister Trudeau that the government has no plans to let the price freeze run longer than the five-month period set when it began Sept. 4.

The NDP leader said he will take the toughest possible stand on this question, possibly voting against the government.

"It could include that. I don't say it will include it, but it could."

He called energy a critical issue and said it is "certainly one on which the government might fall." But he refused to be pinned down, saying it would be "a stupid decision" to make at this stage.

The company has asked the federal government for permission for a price increase of 4.5 cents a gallon on all products from its Montreal refinery, with an increase of 3.9 cents a gallon on gasoline and fuel oils produced in the Atlantic provinces.

The increases are sought to offset higher costs of imported crude from Iran, Venezuela and West Africa that became effective Oct. 15 and Nov. 1, the company said.

Shell Canada Ltd. of Toronto applied earlier this month for approval to raise its gasoline prices by 5.1 cents a gallon east of the Ottawa Valley and to raise fuel prices by 4.5 cents a gallon.

Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto is seeking an increase of 4.8 cents a gallon for gasoline in the same areas and 4.3 cents a gallon for home heating oil.

And in Toronto, provincial Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said Tuesday that Ontario would ration gasoline before banning Sunday driving.

McKeough, however, emphasized that energy supplies are not yet low enough to warrant rationing.

He said it would be extremely difficult to "legitimize" who could drive on Sunday and who couldn't.

Soviet A-Arms Said In Egypt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union probably shipped nuclear weapons into Egypt during the October war, U.S. officials now believe.

These weapons are still believed to be in Egypt, though undoubedly under strict Russian control.

They are thought to be atomic warheads for mobile Soviet-built "Scud" missiles, also shipped to Egypt at some point either before or during the fighting.

The missiles have a range estimated at between 160 to 180 miles, far enough to bring Israeli cities within their reacr if launched from northeastern sectors of Egypt.

The officials say the U.S. detected nuclear material being carried aboard Soviet military supply ships moving from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean.

By itself, this type of information is inconclusive, because the Soviet Navy, like the U.S. Navy, carries nuclear weapons.

Intelligence sources say, however, that this vessel and possibly some others also showed signs of still having some nuclear material aboard when they left port.

Officials decline to discuss the details of whether measuring devices can detect whether some material was unloaded from the ships, or whether there is other evidence to support the view that

More Tape Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House disclosed in court today that an 18-minute segment is missing from another of the Watergate tapes subpoenaed by the special prosecutor's office.

Attorney J. Fred Buzhardt told the court the tape of June 20, 1972, contains 18 minutes of an audible tone but no voice recordings.

"The phenomenon occurred in the course of a conversation," he said, adding that the White House has checked other tapes subpoenaed and found them all in good condition.

Buzhardt told U.S. District Judge John Sirica that technical tests had been made to find the cause of the interruption without success.

Also Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski says the White House warned him that part of his investigation is treading on national security secrets, but he is pursuing the case anyway.

I Was Deceived: Lawson

LAWSON
. . . taking sides

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamsters union leader Ed Lawson said Tuesday British Columbia Health Minister Dennis Cocke "knowingly deceived me" on the Minister's stand in the California grape dispute.

Lawson, international vice-president of the Teamsters, said the provincial government was "clearly taking sides" in what was essentially a dispute between two rival unions and said the issue may cause his union to reassess its position of support for the NDP government.

Lawson made the charges at a press conference, at which he said Cocke "was not telling the truth."

The charges arose from telephone calls between the minister and the Teamsters leader and an interview of Cocke on the CBC.

The dispute over the California grapes is between the Teamsters and Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, with the B.C. Federation of Labor backing the farm workers and ordering a boycott of California grapes.

Last week, Cocke said institutions under his control, such as hospitals, wouldn't be buying California grapes.

Lawson said he phoned Cocke and was assured the boycott applied only to non-union grapes.

Cocke, according to Lawson, said during the CBC interview, the boycott applied to all California grapes.

In the early-morning hours of Oct. 25, teletypes in newspapers, radio and TV stations began chattering out the news that the United States had ordered its armed forces on a world-wide alert as a result of developments in the Middle East war.

Readers and listeners, anxious to know how serious the situation was, were dependent primarily on the three major news-gathering services — Associated Press, Reuters and United Press International. For an analysis of how well the three performed see Page 6 in today's Times.

Greek Roundup Continues

Times News Services

ATHENS — Greek military authorities cracked down today on opposition politicians, students, Communists and other suspected participants in the three-day anti-government rebellion that returned martial law to Greece.

Troops backed by tanks and armored personnel carriers continued to guard the parliament building and Athens university. The army still occupied the Zappeion national garden.

The city was quiet for the third consecutive day since the uprising that left 12 persons dead and about 150 injured and police continued rounding up suspects.

All universities in Greece already had been ordered closed until Dec. 16 in a move to weaken student power, and three politicians, foes of the regime, were placed under house arrest Tuesday night.

Martial law provisions suspend several articles of the constitution dealing with civil liberties and human rights and this has been coupled with press censorship.

A government communique said only that Peron, 78, was recovering from a relapse of a bronchial ailment he suffered last week.

But other sources said the communique was issued to avoid spreading alarm about the health of Peron, who returned to power in Argentina earlier this year.
